EXPLANATIONS.

When I closed the first volume of my work, I thought to complete it in this volume, but it has proved much larger than I expected, and a third volume will be needed to contain the remainder of the family.

This volume consists of branches from the fifth generation from number 558 to 684; the earlier generations and branches from 230 to 557 being in the first volume. I think the remaining branches when completed, will make a third volume as large as the one before you.

In this work I have made use of no unusual abbreviations, using those of months and states, also b., born; bapt., baptized; m., married; d., died; p., page; vol., volume, and dau., daughter.

I make no distinction in the male and female lines, except omitting the name of White when derived from our emigrant ancestor. Each member is numbered at birth, and when the name is followed by + it will be found again in its proper place with the birth number in a bracket at the right of the name. If no + follows, all I could learn is recorded at the birth. The small superior figure at the end of each name denotes the generation.

BETTY Sawyer[5] (566), b. in Lancaster, Mass., Dec. 29, 1738; m. Jan. 26, 1762, Capt. Asa, son of John and Rebecca (Wilder) Whitcomb, b. in Lancaster, bapt. Aug. 16, 1719. His mother was dau. of John and Hannah Wilder of Lancaster, as shown by her father's will written in 1711, probated in 1720. After the death of his father she married Samuel Chamberlain of Chelmsford, and in 1731 Samuel Chamberlain was appointed administrator of the estate of John Whitcomb, Rebecca, his wife, being dead.

Asa Whitcomb is first mentioned in the "Military Annals of Lancaster," July 24, 1748, when he acted as scout with several other men, by order of Col. Willard. He is next mentioned in 1755 as captain in muster roll of Capt. Asa Whitcomb, and he seems to have been in continual service in the Colonial wars until 1758, and perhaps later. On the morning of the 19th of April, 1775, he and his brother, John (afterward Brigadier-General John) were colonels of the two Lancaster regiments. He seems to have been in continual service until April 1, 1777, when it is said that Col. Whitcomb's services ended and he returned to his farm, then the largest in the second precinct of the town. He experienced some trouble because of imperfect records in settling his accounts as pay-master-general of Massachusetts forces, an office which he held for some time during the siege of Boston. No suspicion, however, of his entire integrity, his unselfish patriotism, or his bravery, ever dimmed his reputation. Before the close of the war he removed to Princeton, served that town in the legislature, and there he d. Mar. 16, 1804, at the ripe age of 84.

Col. Whitcomb had a former wife, Eunice Sawyer, by whom he had six children. Children:

Brooks, b. in Woburn, Oct. 10, 1665, and d., minister of the church in Groton, Mass., in the autumn of 1693. Samuel Carter,[3] b. in Woburn, Jan. 7, 1667; m. Mar., 1701, Dorothy, dau. of Nathaniel and Mary (Sawyer) Wilder, sister of Eunice, wife of Capt. John White,[3] (46) as proved by extract from (Worcester Deeds, Vol. 4, p. 162). He was assigned to a garrison house on George Hill with his brothers-in-law, Lieut. Nathaniel and Ephraim Wilder, and Thomas Ross, and his brother, John Carter, and lost by an attack of the Indians July 31, 1704, one cow, one horse, two calves, two swine, and one good dwelling-house with two fires. Nathaniel Carter,[4] b. in 1706; m. (1) Feb. 9, 1731, Thankful, dau. of Elias and Beatrix (Houghton) Sawyer, b. in 1715; d. Dec. 5, 1755. He d. July 20, 1787, and their grave-stones are in the old burying-ground in Leominster. In the Carter Genealogy, p. 55, I find: "Tradition says, (and I believe the records will prove it to be true) that Samuel Carter owned four or five farms, and that he gave one to each of his four sons. Nathaniel being the oldest had his first choice, and, to be better satisfied which was the most valuable, he would work one week on the Bee Hill lot, and the next on the Unckachetwatwuk. One Monday morning when he was about to start, his father says to him: 'Nat, which lot did you work on last week?' 'Bee Hill, sir.' 'Well, that you go on to this morning must be yours.' When he came to the parting of the roads he turned to Bee Hill, where he and his son and grandson Nathaniel lived and died, and the farm is now in the possession of the fourth generation from the first settler."

Elias was the descendant of Thomas Sawyer[1] of Rowley in 1643. He was a blacksmith, came to Lancaster in 1647, and m. in 1648, Mary, dau. of John and Mary (Platts) Prescott, bapt. in Sowerby, Eng., Halifax Parish, Feb. 24, 1630. Thomas Sawyer, Jr.,[2] who seems to have inherited a share of his grandfather John Prescott's energy and capacity, established a second saw-mill in Lancaster before 1700 upon Dean's, now Goodridge's Brook, at the dam near the Deer's Horns school-house. Upon the Sawyer house-lot now stand the church and several dwellings of the Seventh Day Adventist Society in South Lancaster. Thomas Sawyer, Jr., m. Nov. 21, 1672, Hannah ——. Oct. 15, 1705, three men are carried away from Lancaster, from Mr. Sawyer's saw-mill. The three captives were Thomas Sawyer, Jr., his son Elias, a youth of sixteen, and John Bigelow, a carpenter of Marlborough. A younger brother of Elias, about fourteen years old, escaped through a window, it is said, when the others were captured.

From Whitney's history we derive the romantic story of the elder Sawyer's rescue after he had already been tied to the stake for torture. A friar successfully excited the superstitious fears of the savages by brandishing a key, and threatening with it to unlock the door of Purgatory and thrust them into its eternal fires, if they did not release their prisoner to him. He was probably incited thereto by the French Governor, who wished to avail himself of Sawyer's promised skill in the construction of a mill upon the Chambly. The mill built — the first in all Canada — Thomas Sawyer and Bigelow came home. Elias was detained a year longer, to run the mill and instruct others in the art of sawing. The grave of Thomas Sawyer is in the old burying ground. He died "September 5th 1736, in ye 89th Year of his Age."

Elias Sawyer,[3] returned to Lancaster and m. before 1714, no date found, Beatrix, dau. of Robert and Esther (——) Houghton of Lancaster. He d. in Lancaster, Nov. 20, 1752, in the 63d year of his age. Beatrix d. in 1770, aged 86 yrs., buried at Lunenburg, Mass.

From a petition preserved at the State House, Boston, we learn that Elias Carter was in the service of the government in the Crown Point Expedition, Samuel Willard's company, in the regiment of Col. John Whitcomb. The paper states, that "returning home from camp last fall my son Elias Carter was taken very sick, and so remained for seventeen days at Sheffield, and above the doctor's bill it cost me thirty shillings for my expenses, and thirteen shillings and four pence for horse hire, to fetch my son home, besides my time, which I would humbly pray your Excellency and Honours to allow your petitioner as in duty bound.

(Signed) NATHANIEL CARTER.

"In 1794 Mr. White established himself in business as a tanner and gained a wide reputation for the quality of his leather. In this he continued until 1821. After the peace of 1815 had given a new impulse to the manufacturing interests of the country, Mr. White, with others, turned his attention to the growth of fine wool and purchased, at what was then deemed almost fabulous prices, the first merino sheep ever brought into (Charlestown). They were purchased of Col. James, of Weathersfield Bow (Vt.), and the price paid was two hundred dollars ($200) apiece. The wool of these sheep was of such fine texture and so superior to anything that had previously been seen as to excite general attention throughout the country, and Mr. White, for fabrics manufactured from it, received in 1819 and a few subsequent years over $400 in highest premiums, from the Cheshire County Agricultural Society, which was success sufficient one would think to have fully satisfied his ambition. (With some of this money he purchased a dozen very heavy silver table-spoons and we saw a pair of them a few years since at Mr. Henry Giffin's at Keene, N. H. They were marked 'premium spoons'). Many of his articles were so superior to any others that were entered that it could scarcely be said that he had any competition." Josiah d. Dec. 16, 1852. Mrs. White d. Apr. 25, 1854, aged 73. H., Sept. 2, 1818. He went to Salt Lake City previous to 1848 and was married by Brigham Young in his office in Salt Lake City, Utah, Jan. 29, 1855, to Emily, dau. of Abraham and Margaret Hoagland, b. in Royal Oak, Mich., Sept. 20, 1837, and m., also in the same place, Jan. 29, 1856, Mary M., dau. of Chandler and Eunice (Dunning) Holbrook, b. in Liberty, Mo., May 13, 1836. The following biographical sketch of Col. Jesse C. Little is taken from a Utah paper: "Col. Jesse C. Little, one of Utah's pioneers died yesterday morning at the residence of his son, Salt Lake City. Col. Little was one of the best known characters in the history of this territory and had been identified with its growth and development from that memorable twenty-fourth day of July, 1847, when in company with those other pioneers they entered the Salt Lake Valley. . . . Shortly after the Mexican War broke out Col. Little was then in the east, visited Washington, D. C., at the suggestion of President Brigham Young, for the purpose of soliciting governmental aid for the Latter Day Saints in their exodus from Illinois to the West. It was thought that the national authorities might wish to employ the Mormons in freighting provisions and naval stores to Oregon and other points on the Pacific coast. Col. Little went to Governor Steele of New Hampshire and Thomas L. Kane of Philadelphia, both of whom were his old-time friends. From these he received letters of introduction to Secretary of the Navy Bancroft and Vice-president Dallas. Col. Little obtained an audience with President Polk and laid the matter before him. The President received him favorably. He afterwards sent a petition on the subject to the President in which he said: 'If you will assist us in this crisis, I will pledge my honor as a representative of this people that the whole body will stand ready at your call and act as one man in the land to which we are going and should our territory be invaded we will hold ourselves ready to enter the field of battle and then like our patriotic fathers make the battlefield our graves or gain our liberty.' It was at this junction that news reached Washington of the outbreak of the Mexican War. President Polk determined to use the migrating Mormons for the purpose of taking possession of California. His plan was to send Col. Little to their camps in Iowa, have them take a dash into California, and take possession of it in the name of the United States. They were to be armed and equipped by the government and a thousand of their number were to be sent by way of Cape Horn. This plan was about to be carried into execution when Senator Thomas H. Benton of Missouri received the charge which took the Mormon batallion to Mexico.

Colonel Little bore the special dispatches relating to the Mormon batallion to General Keanney at Fort Leavenworth. He then united with the pioneer company, being the adjutant in its military organization for crossing the plains.

The later years of Colonel Little's life have been spent in retirement on his farm in Morgan County, but, in the prime of his life, he occupied many positions of trust among the people. Among the offices which he held in Salt Lake City, were those of sexton and city marshal. This latter position he occupied forty years ago, when the foundation of the great temple was laid. He was once United States assessor of internal revenues for Utah, was one of the committee which drew up the resolutions upon the completion of the first transcontinental railway by the union of the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific roads and was proprietor of the first hotel at the Warm Springs, Utah. He was also leader of the party that explored Cache Valley in 1847. He was councillor to Bishop Hunter and presiding elder for twenty-one years. Colonel Little was the first chief of the fire department of Salt Lake City, when that division of municipal affairs was formed in 1856. The city council placed him at its head. In this and other public positions, the energy of his character was manifest in his zeal to discharge the responsibilities laid upon him." Colonel Little d. Dec. 25, 1893.

In 1852, he went to California, taking with him his first wife, who died while crossing the plains, leaving him with a little boy twelve months old. Mr. Moore took him through to California, and upon starting to return home in the spring of 1855, took passage on the ill-fated "Yankee Blade," which was wrecked about twenty-four hours after starting. She had over 1100 passengers on board, of whom about three hundred were lost. Mr. Moore lost his son and was picked up himself insensible, by a lady on the beach, where the breakers had washed him; he lost everything he had, not even having a coat and hat left. After remaining on the beach three days, he was taken off by the steamer "Goliah," that ran between San Francisco and Los Angeles: in nearly a famished condition he was taken back to San Francisco, stayed there about one week and went again to the mines, where he soon began to do well, but having become discouraged in six weeks, he once more started for home and in due time reached Hancock Co., where they were married, and settled in St. Charles, Mo., and he engaged in market gardening. ABIJAH[5] (581), b. in Leominster, Mass., Nov. 21, 1751; removed with his father to Charlestown, N. H., and later to Rockingham, Vt., where he served as a private in Capt. William Upham's company eight days from October 17, 1780. (Capt. Upham lived in Weathersfield, Windsor County, Vt.) Abijah was living in Rockingham in 1802, where he had four children in school and was still in Rockingham in 1806 and 1807 with wife Polly, as two of his children were buried in the old Parker burying ground, which lies in Springfield near the border of Rockingham. It is said in 1806, when on the death of his father, an account of his descendants was taken to be put upon his gravestone, that Abijah had had nine children and four grandchildren, but I have been unable to find any further trace of him or his descendants. Children:

States from September 27 to October 20, 1777, and received £2 : 00 : 00. This was without doubt in the last battle of Saratoga and at the surrender of Burgoyne, as history tells us that Colonel Williams was there. He also served as a private eleven days in Capt. Jonathan Holton's company, Col. Ebenezer Woods' regiment of militia, in an alarm in October, 1780, and received £1 : 14 : 08. He d. Aug. 27, 1781, aged near 26 years. Administration was granted his widow Jane who had married Isaac Stearns before 1794. In the account gathered in 1806 on the death of his father, Asa is said to have had two children and nine grandchildren, but we have been unable to learn their names or where they lived.

JOHN E. Goodenow[7] (10784), b. in Springfield, Vt., Mar. 23, 1812; moved when a child with his parents to Queensbury, Warren Co., N. Y., where he remained until 1837, when he left his home in the east and started westward "to spy out the land," promising to send back a report, the nature of which may be known by his being followed to Iowa the next spring by Thomas Wright and wife, Amasa Nims and Mr. Goodenow's sister, who came to keep house for him. He built the first house of logs, erected in what is now Maquoketa, Jackson Co., Iowa, in 1838, where he has since resided. He was the first hotel-keeper and postmaster, also started a grist-mill, and in the fall of 1839 he returned to New York and married in Bolton, Eliza Wright. They returned to his home in Iowa on their wedding trip in a covered wagon, being nine weeks on the way. Mr. Goodenow was the first mayor of Maquoketa, was elected in 1853, and is considered the father of the town. He has served as county assessor, was member of the general assembly of 1849 and 1850, and had the honor of naming two counties —Kossuth and Osceola, the latter in honor of his first born, who was, with one exception, the first white child born in Jackson Co., Iowa. Mar. 23, 1770, in Lancaster, while of Lunenburg (where she was probably stopping with her aunt, Mrs. Silence White Heyward, her own mother having died when she was a little child), with Philemon, son of Capt. Joseph and Damaris (Priest) Whitcomb, b. in Lancaster, Oct. 29, 1748. He moved to Swanzey, N. H., where his father had settled some years previous and owned a saw and grist-mill, which Philemon bought in 1790 of his father and his brother Abijah. He conveyed June 4, 1819, three-fourths of the mills to his son Benjamin and one-fourth to his son Philemon, Oct. 3, 1823. Five days after, Philemon, Jr., took the deed of one-fourth of the mills. He sold the same to his brother Benjamin. Sept. 2, 1790, Joseph Whitcomb, Jr., conveyed to Philemon Whitcomb one acre of land upon which the forge stood and the water power connected with it. The forge was upon the west side of the river and the deed was executed after Joseph Whitcomb had moved to Grafton, Vt. One-half of the forge property which he bought of his brother Joseph, Jr., he conveyed to his son Jotham in 1807; the other half was owned by his daughter Damaris, Mrs. Frink. He was major-general in 1810 of the third division of New Hampshire militia, he having previously served by substitute in 1777, four months, his substitute being Benjamin Parker. Mr. Whitcomb was probably obliged to remain at home to attend to the business of the family, as his brothers, Capt. Jonathan, Maj. Elisha and Abijah, were all in the service.

Dr. Brigham received his education in the common schools with a year in the Washington Co., Vt., grammar school and a half year in Poultney, Vt., Academy and studied medicine with Dr. David C. Joslyn of Waitsfield, Dr. S. W. Thayer of Burlington and Professor Benjamin R. Palmer of Woodstock, graduating from Woodstock Medical College in 1845, attending three courses of lectures. He has practiced three years in Warren, then three years in Waitsfield; removed to Montpelier in 1849; attended lectures in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City, spending much time in the hospitals. About this time he became a convert to homeopathy and was the second person in middle Vermont to espouse the cause at this time so unpopular, and one of six who founded a state homeopathic society, of which he was the first president. He has educated quite a number of students in his office, among whom, his own son, Dr. Homer C. Brigham of Montpelier, Vt., and later of Grand Rapids, Mich. While at Montpelier, he served as postmaster and superintendent of common schools, lectured on education, temperance and sundry scientific subjects, and has been a contributor to medical journals, and known to the circular press in essays and poetical contributions for over twenty-five years. He delivered the class poem before the Norwich University in 1870; published in that year "The Harvest Moon and other Poems," at the Riverside Press, which, with additions, came out in a second edition. Dr. Brigham removed to Grand Rapids, in 1875, where he was a founder and early president of the Hahnemannian Homes Medical Society. Mrs. Brigham d. in Montpelier, Vt., Mar. 21, 1873. He m. He enlisted in the American army at the commencement of the Revolution and continued in the service during the war. At the time of the Battle of Bunker Hill, he was on picket duty in the vicinity, therefore not in the fight. He was in the Battle of Monmouth, and served faithfully where duty called him. After the war, he emigrated to Plymouth, Vt., where he resided several years, and was captain of the first military company in that town, and afterward known as Capt. Wilder. About 1790, he removed to Woodstock, Vt., where he was much esteemed and respected until his death, July 12, 1848, aged 91 years. The Woodstock "Mercury," in announcing his death, pays a handsome tribute to his peaceful life and patriotic principles. "He was characterized not only by honesty of purpose, but by sound sense and good judgment. He was well acquainted with Revolutionary and political history of the country; truly patriotic in his feelings, and warmly attached to the national constitution and the union of the states, which he held as sacred and inviolable, and of perpetual obligation on every American citizen. His memory is unsullied by the record of a single dishonorable act, in private life or in social or political relations, or the least participation in any intrigue or artifice to defraud or deceive a fellow man."

(Extract from a letter written by Chauncey Richardson, who was born in Woodstock, Vt., in 1793).

LOVISA[6] (11456), b. in Charlemont, Mass., Sept. 17, 1778; m. Jan. 8, 1820, Joseph, son of Dea. Elias and Rhoda (Flower) Griswold, b. in Litchfield, Conn., May 23, 1877. He moved with his parents to Buckland, Mass., when about eight years of age, where they always lived. In 1818, he built the present old Griswold homestead, which has always been the seat of liberal hospitality. He was a farmer and mechanic, prosperous and successful business man, active in the promotion of all educational and religious movements; was the friend of Mary Lyon and did much to assist and encourage her, in the early stages of her wonderful and noble career. Her first select school was taught in the hall of his house. For a long series of years he was called to occupy the most responsible offices of his town, and the fidelity with

JOSEPH Griswold, Jr.[7] (11503), b. in Buckland, Mass., Aug. 9, 1806; m. Nov. 23, 1828, Louisa M. Dennison, b. Oct. 4, 1811, in Stonington, Conn. As a young man he was enterprising, ingenious, energetic and persevering. In 1832, he began the cotton manufacturing business in Colerain, Mass., and there laid the foundation of the flourishing village which bears his name (Griswoldville), and of the Griswold Manufacturing Co. in Colerain and Turners Falls, Mass., well known as one of the oldest and most successful companies in the state. He was president of a corporation founded by himself and three sons. Mr. Griswold was a man of strong character and marked individuality, possessing the most extensive, varied and accurate information. Amid all the cares of business, he was a diligent and rapid reader, an intelligent observer and student of the events of his times. He was especially familiar with the history, growth and condition of the manufacturing and other great industries of this and other countries. He has had much in his busy life to contend with that would have disheartened a man of less determination and energy. Twice have his mills been destroyed by fire; a cargo of his cotton was destroyed by the "Alabama"; and floods have swept away his property with a merciless hand; yet he never lost heart, and began to replace his losses in each case with the vigor of youth. He has never sought office or political honors, but has devoted his life strictly to business and may be called a man of work, giving all his varied and extensive interests a constant and personal supervision. ordained over the First Congregational Unitarian Society in Littleton, Mass., in 1828, remaining there during his life. He m. Feb. 12, 1829, Sarah Bass, dau. of his predecessor, Rev. Edmund and Phebe (Lawrence) Foster, b. in Littleton, May 6, 1799. Thus the three main wishes in his life were fulfilled in the study for the ministry, the settlement in Littleton and marriage with Miss Foster. Mr. White was known as a faithful, conscientious pastor and "abundant in extra professional labors." Mr. White d. in Littleton, July 25, 1853. Rev. JAMES C. White[6] (12490), b. in Lancaster, Mass., Oct. 12, 1806. He was the youngest of nine children and his father died July 1, before his birth. The following is in his own words: "My mother, being an invalid at my birth, and there being nine of us children, I was sent from home when I was but a year and a half old to live with my mother's sister, wife of Deacon Wheeler of Lincoln, Mass., and in one year I was transferred to the family of another aunt, wife of Deacon Samuel Farrar of the same town. I was at that time but two and a half years of age, but I remember the change to this day (Oct. 12, 1886) how and by whom made. I lived upon the farm with Uncle Farrar until I was fifteen years of age, when I was offered by my Aunt Farrar a college course at Harvard, and presumptively, a theological course at Andover. But my mind was fully bent on mercantile life. Therefore, I returned to my native home, spent one year in school, most of it at the 'Lancaster Academy,' on the 'Old Common.'

"I went to Boston in 1822, first year of municipal corporation, and wrought sixteen hours a day at the carpenter's trade, when I went into the dry goods' store of John Banchor on Washington Street, corner of West Street. The next year Mr. Banchor removed to a new store on Hanover Street, corner of Salem, the third store on the street. It was on Hanover Street that I spent my mercantile life, putting up my own sign in September, 1826 (1827), one month before my majority, adopting for my middle name that of Coolidge, which was my mother's mother's name. I did it because there were six James Whites in Boston. I was in the dry goods business on that street, and principally at No. 45, nearly opposite Friend Street twelve years, and on the very spot where I made a confession of Christ and joined the Hanover Street Church in 1826, of which Dr. Beecher (Lyman) was pastor. The church building was burnt down Jan. 1, 1830.

"In the hall over my dry goods store, I opened a 'Bonnet Store,' occupying the whole sixty foot front, which obtained great celebrity as 'Deacon White's Bonnet Rooms.' The business was continued under my sign and in my name for years after I began the work of the gospel ministry in Cincinnati, Ohio."

Again we find the following in the "Herald and Presbyter" written by Rev. Mr. White after his eightieth birthday: "Sixty years ago last winter in Boston, Mass., I made my temperance debut in the organization and successful inauguration of a teetotal temperance society of young men. It was probably the first of the kind in Massachusetts, and was one among the many results of hearing Dr. Beecher's famous six sermons on temperance. Though but a lad, I hired a hall and advertised at my own expense, made the only speech of the occasion, and obtained five subscribers with which to organize. The pledge was an iron-clad one, and the membership only young men. The number soon went up to two hundred, of whom Wm. Lloyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips were distinguished members, true and loyal to the last. I was honored with the secretaryship. This step was in advance of all others, and was, in its day, potential, and on one occasion, at least, gave the silver-tongued Phillips an opportunity to display his forensic eloquence and power of debate, second only to his address in Faneuil Hall on the martyrdom of Lovejoy, though yet in his teens."

In 1825, Mr. White was converted and joined Dr. Lyman Beecher's church, and in time became deacon in the "Old Salem Street Church" and teacher of a Bible class. One of the institutions of Boston during Dr. Beecher's pastorate was "Deacon White's Bible Class," which numbered for years seventy young ladies, of whom it is said they studied the Book of Romans with all the intensity and more than the perseverance of theological students.

Mr. White says: "While on a visit from Ohio to a state convention of churches in New England, I was introduced, playfully, as the 'Founder' of that well-known institution in Boston, 'White's Bonnet Rooms.' When I rose in response, I acknowledged the honor and added: 'But the reverend gentleman forgot to say that he was one of its graduates; and that I had five clerks who studied for the ministry, of whom I was proud; and that if more of the New England ministry had graduated from 'White's Bonnet Rooms,' or similar institutions, it would have been better for the cause of Christ. I am glad to point to the gentleman who has just taken his seat as a specimen."

Engagement in religious work gradually led to a desire to preach the gospel and in 1839, at the age of thirty-three, through the influence of Dr. Beecher, Mr. White followed his pastor to Cincinnati, Ohio. Withdrawing from his prosperous business, and entering upon the study of theology, having before graduated at Wittemberg College, Springfield, Ohio, he studied at Lane Theological Seminary during the period from 1840 to 1842. Licensed to preach in 1840, he first labored, while in the pursuit of his studies, under the auspices of the City Missionary Society of the Second Presbyterian Church and was chaplain of the Cincinnati Hospital and the County Jail. After that, in 1841 to 1842, he gathered and organized in the part of the city then called "Texas," the Tabernacle Church, and now the home of the Fifth Presbyterian Church. Mr. White was ordained by the Presbytery of Cincinnati in 1842 and was pastor of the Tabernacle Church until 1850, when failing health compelled him to go abroad for a year. Most of the expenses for this journey were met by literary work, corresponding for a number of prominent periodicals, giving most interesting accounts of his travels. On his return from Europe he engaged in work in Springfield, Ohio, where he organized a Congregational Church, remaining until 1854. From 1854 to 1861, he was pastor of the Plymouth Congregational Church, Cleveland, Ohio; from 1861 to 1866, of the free Congregational Church, Providence, R. I.; from 1866 to 1869, of the Congregational Church, Dayton, Ohio, and from 1869 to 1872, of the Oakland Congregational Church, Chicago, Ill. In the year 1872 he returned to the field of his early labors, and for the period of eighteen years was the faithful and beloved pastor of the Poplar Street Presbyterian Church of Cincinnati, Ohio. Thus with the good hand of God upon him, he was permitted to end his ministerial life in the same region in which it was begun, and officiated at the installment of his successor Oct. 5, 1890. During his more than fifty years of service, he preached the gospel Sabbath by Sabbath with but slight interruption, and when one of his last sermons was delivered, on the occasion of his eighty-fourth birthday, Oct. 12, 1890, his voice rang out with the fire of youth, and his words breathed of an intellect that time could not impair. The character of Mr. White both as a man and a minister was marked. He was a rare man. The story of his life is one of great and fascinating interest. His long and active public career was one which might worthily be recorded with high distinction in the annals of the church. As a friend has said, "The name Rev. James C. White has been to me a synonym for princely manhood and devout Christian character. Everything in his career seemed to me to have been grand, of a grandeur that was not overpowering, but stimulating and encouraging." A New Englander to the manor born, he possessed the strength of constitution, earnestness of moral conviction and intensity of spiritual power which are marked characteristics of many descendants of the Puritans. To these natural traits was added contact, both as pastor and professor, with one of the most remarkable men of his generations. The influence of Dr. Lyman Beecher was powerful to the last. It affected his thinking, his preaching, his life, and found expression in a publication entitled "Personal Reminiscences of Lyman Beecher." More than any other human force it influenced him to engagement in evangelistic work. With the "founder of Lane Theological Seminary," he gloried in the proclamation of the gospel, and not in vain. His labors were often followed by the outpouring of the Holy Spirit in conversion, so that he could witness toward the close of life that more than one thousand souls had been added to the church as a result of his ministry.

Mr. White was a man of unselfish devotion. As a pastor, the salary was to him a thing indifferent. During his ministry he superintended the building of six churches, and three times sold his own home to prevent the failure of the enterprises undertaken by the people of his charge. His unselfishness was also characteristic of his dealings with the poor and needy. Those who were in want never went away empty handed. The burdened, the tried, the weary, found ever in him a friend, not only wise in counsel and sympathetic in spirit, but also ready to give material aid so far as lay in his power. Not only church members, but others likewise, were objects of his care, especially the negroes, who before the war escaped from bondage in the south and sought refuge among the liberty-loving men and women of Southern Ohio. Many a slave he aided in his efforts to reach that liberty, both of body and the soul, with which the gospel makes men free. Well, may it be said, he followed the Master, doing good unto all men.

The singular loveliness of his personal character, more than anything else perhaps, enshrined him in the hearts of men, and contributed to his marked success as a pastor, and gave tone to his entire life-work — one of those rare spirits whose very presence seemed to bring a benediction upon the hearts of all those with whom he mingled. He was loved because he was naturally lovable and because his nature was sweetened and perfected by divine grace and communion with the God of love. He was trusted because of his genuine sincerity and open-hearted frankness. He was honored because he was the soul of honor. He attracted men, not only to himself, but to Christ, because there was in him so much of the spirit of Christ. In the church, which he so long and so faithfully served, he was revered as a patriarch and loved as a father. At the close of the service the little children would flock about him to take his outstretched hand in theirs. In the social circle he was the central figure, the life of the merriest group, quick witted, vivacious, bright, sunny, and always welcome. But it was in the home that his affectionate nature found room for its freest exercise. Home was a veritable Beulah-land to him and he aimed to make it a Beulah-land to all its loved inmates. His children were the joy of his heart and the pride of his life, and the rare testimony is borne concerning him that he was never heard to speak a cross word. There seemed to be scarcely any such thing in his nature as resentment. He was gentle under the greatest provocation. He was a man of intellectual power and brilliancy, but all this was made subservient to the practical work of ministering to others. It has often been wondered at why a man of his gifts and talents, his attainments and culture, his character and reputation, his shining success in literary and professional work, did not win him the higher honors which institutions of learning usually confer on acknowledged worth and merit. It would be difficult to name a man more worthy to receive such honors from men than he was. He did not seek them. However humble the place, however destitute of all opportunity to attract the attention of men and win their praises, however arduous its duties, however wearing and wearisome its work, if it was the service his Master asked, then all which might be deemed its hardships were transmuted into attractions to win him the more joyously to engage in it. Under the uplift and inspiration of this consuming loyalty to his Master he was raised above all desire to seek praise of men. He appreciated the confidence, the approval, the esteem of his brethren if he could win them by fidelity to the Master, but the honors, degrees and titles they could confer he did not seek.

At a meeting of the "Lane Seminary Club" the following minute was unanimously adopted and ordered spread upon the record:

"Mr. White was one of the most faithful and devoted alumni of this institution and a member of this club from its organization. Ordained by the Presbytery of Cincinnati in 1842, he was active in the ministry up to the time of his death in his eighty-fifth year. As his co-presbyters and his fellow laborers we have known of his zeal, his self-denial and his consecration. As members of this club we have witnessed his fidelity to the Seminary and his loyalty to her interests. We have been edified by his example, and instructed by the part he has taken in our exercises. We rejoice in the good work he was able to do for the Master, and enjoy with all who knew him the assurance that, having been gathered to his fathers 'as a shock of corn fully ripe,' he has entered upon the bliss of those who are welcomed as having been faithful unto death. With this faith we congratulate his children upon the rich heritage he has left them in his good name, his Christian work, and the grace given him as a preacher of the gospel of Christ. With them, we honor his memory and strive to emulate his example."

On his eighty-first birthday he was presented by the members of the Cincinnati Presbytery with a silver salver and five other pieces of silverware as a token of their esteem and regard. The one chosen to make the presentation speech said, among other things, "We thoroughly love and honor you, not only as a noble type of an apostolic ministry, but also as a splendid specimen of the product of our American and Christian civilization."

It was natural that the closing days of his earthly career should be characterized by clear evidences of implicit trust in the Redeemer. The visions during his last hours of "Beulah land" were beautiful, tender and touching. Having realized in his own experience the unspeakable preciousness of Jesus Christ, no wonder was it that the twenty-third Psalm was time and again upon his lips. Among his last utterances were these: "My Saviour has suffered and I shall suffer, but he will strengthen me" and "Hand me gently down the declivity of life." When his eyes were momentarily closed to the scenes of this world the spiritual vision was opened upon heavenly scenes. These sights and sounds, he said, could not possibly be described in human language. While enjoying these foretastes of heaven, and filled with heavenly joy thereat, he was heard to say, as if searching amid these transcendent scenes of bliss and glory for that he most coveted, "The Master! Where is the Master?" Peaceful slumber of a few minutes' duration and he was with the Master he loved and sought.

"When the sun goes below the horizon he is not set; the heavens

HEPZIBAH S. Newhall[7] (12510), b. in Lincoln, Mass., June 16, 1831; d. in Stow, Mass., Dec. 22, 1893. The following in memoriam was sent me by an intimate friend and cousin of Miss Newhall's and I think deserves a place in these pages:

"God giveth quietness at last!
The common way that all have passed
She went, with mortal yearnings fond,
To fuller life and love beyond."

To those alone who knew and loved this rare woman can the full force of the announcement of her death come, and it seems fitting that some record should be made of a life so cheerfully spent in the service of others.

Simple it must be, with meaning only for those who hold the key of tender memories; for, who shall describe the quaint personality, the singular purity of glance and expression, and originality of action that endeared her to youth and age alike.

"To those who knew her not, no words can paint;
And those who knew her, know all words are faint."

She was born in Lincoln, Massachusetts, on the sixteenth day of June, 1831, being the second daughter of Pliny and Catherine White Newhall. Her earlier life was passed in the homes of various relatives and friends, where her presence was ever a joy and a benediction, her more permanent and final home being with her sister, Mrs. Eliza Fletcher of Stow, Mass.

Debarred from the sweet offices of wifehood and motherhood, she poured forth the rich treasures of her heart, not upon one home, but many, and became, alike in joy or sorrow, the ever faithful friend and gentle sympathizer.

No service seemed too great for her to render, nor in sweet humility was any deed too lowly, and it was in "The little nameless, unremembered acts Of kindness and of love," that she seemed to find her deepest happiness.

She was essentially a bearer of the "cup of cold water," and some of the most treasured memories of her friends are of the shyly offered flower, the tender verse, or the simple act of helpfulness that expressed her sympathy or affection.

She poured out her life in the great glory of love, seemingly without a taint of selfishness, and it was in harmony with the spirit of her life that when the strong angel came, swiftly, but very tenderly, she should be found in the midst of her simple duties, and that, calmly consigning the unfinished task into other hands, she should willingly and fearlessly obey the summons, and leave behind naught but memories of sweet peace and quietude and spiritual uplifting.

Her body lies in the quiet cemetery in Lincoln, and the white marble stone which marks the hallowed spot — fit emblem of her pure and cherished memory — bears on the face her name and the following lines, which all who knew her must feel to be appropriate:

"The passing of as sweet a soul
As ever looked through human eyes."

So God took her to Himself, this child of His, who had no fear and was all trust, and life is the better for her having lived.

Vergennes, Vt., Aug. 21, 1804. "He graduated from the University of Vermont in 1829 and from Andover Theological Seminary in 1834, then went to Virginia to do missionary work, where he conducted a female seminary, remaining until 1840, when he moved to Newtown, Ind., where he was ordained and installed as pastor in the Presbyterian Church in June, 1841. He did missionary work in Indiana, until he moved to Marinette, Wis., in 1863, where he organized the first church and built the first house of worship, which is now known as the 'Pioneer Presbyterian Church.' He did much missionary work there, also in Michigan. It is said of him, he was a man thoroughly devoted to his life work, of more than ordinary mind and a great student. Though for a few years before his death he had not been in active service, still his mind was remarkably bright and vigorous, and he kept himself acquainted with all the topics of the day. On the anniversary of his eightieth birthday a large number of the old settlers and friends gathered at his residence, bringing many tokens of love and esteem, which was very gratifying to him, coming as it did when he was waiting for his summons home. Only a few more months of intense suffering and he departed to be with Christ, Apr. 24, 1885, 'a shock of corn fully ripe.'" 12815. Esther Louisa Parker,[8] b. Feb. 18, 1838; d. July 10, 1839.

JOSEPH B. Parker[7] (12710), b. in Princeton, Mass., July 31, 1805; m. Oct. 16, 1833, Mary Ann, dau. of Calvin and Polly (Forbush) Morgan, b. in Brimfield, Mass., Dec. 28, 1809. He settled in the house which he built for himself in West Boylston, which stands near the grist-mill at the junction of the roads. He was a true and active student in the teachings of Christ and a devoted follower of Him, his Master. In July, 1835, he was chosen deacon of the Orthodox Congregational Church in West Boylston. He later removed to Clinton, residing near the depot.

Aside from his home training, his early education was limited to the common district school of his town. At the age of fifteen he was apprenticed to Joel Howe, a blacksmith of Princeton, with whom he remained six years. Completing his apprenticeship, he entered the machine shop of Samuel Flagg of Oakdale. In this position he developed at once an uncommon tact for his new employment, for within a year he was appointed foreman of the shop, on account of which some of the senior workmen, refusing to work under so young a man, resigned; but his apparent ability as a machinist held for him his position and his manly demeanor won back his disaffected shop-mates and made them ever after his true and faithful friends.

His engagement with Mr. Flagg terminating, he commenced the machine business on his own account, occupying the shop formerly occupied by Mr. Flagg. Meanwhile, E. B. Bigelow, then of West Boylston, and since so distinguished as an inventor, had conceived the idea of building a loom for weaving counterpanes. In his struggle to bring forth the invention he sought the aid of Deacon Parker. The coming together of these two men resulted in the formation of a company to complete the undertaking and put the loom in operation. The company consisted of E. B. Bigelow, Dea. Parker and Eli Holbrook, all young men of about the same age. This loom, however, was not a success. The company wanting means to carry on the work further, the enterprise was for a time abandoned, though they fully believed in the final success of the work.

From this the inventive genius of E. B. Bigelow was turned to his coach lace loom, which at once came to better results. This loom was built by Dea. Parker and put in operation at Shirley Village, and later was removed to Clinton. In 1840 Dea. Parker removed his business to Providence, R. I. The success of the Messrs. Bigelow being assured, they, with others, formed a company, purchased the water power in Clinton, built a machine shop and made extensive preparations for operating their new inventions. After the trial of other machinists to build their machinery the Bigelows again sought the aid of Dea. Parker. He came from Providence to Clinton and was put in charge of the new machine shop built by the Clinton Company. This new position brought more fully his mechanical ability to the test. Following the coach lace loom came the reconstruction of the counterpane looms then running, but which had not done satisfactory work. These were all rebuilt, resulting in the manufacture of a much improved fabric. Following these were the gingham and Brussels carpet looms, each of which was the first loom of its kind ever in operation. All these were made under Dea. Parker's supervision. All were new, there being no models to work from or workmen experienced in that line of machinery building. Everything was wrought out step by step without the suggestion or the aid of others. In the coach lace loom was found the germ of the Brussels carpet loom, which was brought to its present state of perfection only by the protracted study of years. To invent or make such a masterpiece of machinery is honor enough for any man and justly entitles him to lasting fame. The idea of a machine being given him, he could make it, which, oftener than otherwise, is the most difficult part to perform.

In 1851 Dea. Parker went to England to superintend the setting up of Brussels carpet looms. He returned after eight months. Soon after he built a manufactory in Clinton. His business at once increased; the machine shop was doubly enlarged, and under his management it became an important business interest of Clinton, and it is still conducted under the name of The J. B. Parker Machine Co. His strong points as a man of business were his strength and clearness of mind. These were seen in everything. United with his intense application, this quality was invaluable to him as a machinist. He was a man of superior judgment. This also appeared in all matters of every-day life. He was every man's counsellor, though he never wore a title. In his business few men were his equal as a judge of machinery. Young men esteemed it a privilege to be taught the trade of a machinist by him. His ideal of a machine was perfection. Great care was taken to make every machine perfect. Nothing was allowed to leave his shop that was not so. This had much to do with his success in after life. His attention to all the details of his business was unremitting — he trusted nothing to others; and as it was continuously on the increase it was almost a matter of necessity that he be more and more industriously occupied with its cares and management. In the summer of 1859 he and his family spent a day at the seashore in York, Me., which up to that time was the only holiday of the kind he had enjoyed.

Few men are identified with the almost model town of Clinton more than Dea. Parker. In the variety and extent of its manufactures, in its rapid growth and continued prosperity, he took a constant and bore a conspicuous part; and could the town be photographed in its moral as well as in its material aspects it would appear that he was even more an important factor in it. A man of clear head, sound judgment and Christian character that always commanded respect and confidence. He, with others, did the most valuable pioneer service in laying the foundations of the moral and religious institutions of the town. He exerted a strong influence over young men and by his counsel and example was most useful in aiding them to make a good start in life. Though sufficiently conservative, he was a man of reform, always headed in the right direction, always standing for the best things, no man ever doubting how he would talk or what he would do when the common good was at stake.

ARTEMUS Parker[7] (12718), b. in Princeton, Mass., Feb. 22, 1819; m. ——, Susan, dau. of John and Lucy (Carroll) Pierce of West Boylston, Mass., b. in Sutton, Mass. They soon removed to Boston and later to Kansas with the early settlers of that state. When the Kansas war broke out he was journeying from Columbus, Ohio, and had a curious experience. While proceeding through Kansas on horseback, his attention was attracted by a mob, and, curious to know its meaning, he hastened into its midst. He was supposed to be one of the leaders of the mob, was arrested by the authorities and imprisoned for three months. Later he gathered his family together in Columbus, where he d. Oct. 8, 1864. Child:

12841. Susan Emily Parker,[8] +.

QUINCY Parker, Jr.[7] (12719), b. in Rindge, N. H., Jan. 12, 1821.

Most of his childhood was spent in Rindge, but he was for a while in Princeton and Boylston. At fourteen he started out to earn his own living, and at sixteen he determined to learn the moulder's trade, entering the High street Foundry, Providence, R. I., in which city his mother was living. This trade he mastered in two years. Wishing to see something of the world, he left home and let himself as a sailor on the whaleship New England of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., bound for South America. He felt perfectly at home on board ship and easily distinguished himself among his fellow-sailors. Prizes were offered by the captain for the one who first saw the whale. He was the first to win the prize. He loved to race his companions about the rigging, being exceptionally quick and strong. For six years he cruised at sea and visited Talquehama, Callao, Lima, and all places of any note along the coast of South America. Like many sailors, much might be said about his travels, his narrow and miraculous escapes from drowning, sunstrokes, etc. In the employ of the Peruvian government he explored the Andes mountains and the wild parts of Peru. After satisfying his love for romantic adventure and witnessing many wonderful things he shipped for home. The captain of the vessel was a tyrant and was soon universally hated by the crew. While at sea he safely escaped from the ship and came the remainder of the way upon other vessels.

Returning home to Providence, he gave his mother and friends a great surprise, as they had received no word from him and all supposed him dead. In Providence he again worked at the moulder's trade, at which he was a very efficient workman, and continued at the Franklin foundry for twenty-four years. In 1848 he was m. to Almira Kent of Eaton, N. Y. They settled upon Smith Hill in Providence. After the death of Milton Parker, his youngest son, he engaged in the florist business at his home, besides being the maker of "Parker's Premium Tomato Catsup." Mrs. Parker d. Jan. 30, 1888. He m. June 5, 1889, Susie Ella, dau. of Theodore and Ellen (Joslyn) Greenwood of Ashburnham. He was a physician in Chicago, where he d. Jan. 13, 1899, and the following tribute from his brother physicians will show the esteem in which he was held:

"The death of Dr. Walter H. Marble came as a great shock to his many friends in this city. Four days before his death he was about his professional work as usual. He was taken slightly ill on Tuesday, and his intimate friend and former business partner, Dr. James P. Houston, was called. Wednesday it was thought best to call a surgeon in consultation. Dr. Marble was removed to a hospital soon afterward. It became necessary to operate early the next morning and the best skill of the city was summoned. Everything that science and love could suggest was done, but of no avail, and in less than twenty-four hours he was dead.

"About fifteen years ago, after graduating at Dartmouth College, Dr. Marble came to Chicago for his education in medicine. Graduating among the first in his class, and after serving a year in Mercy hospital, he started his own work of the practice of medicine. Unknown and without influence, he started, and it has been the fortune of few men to have achieved in these few years what he has. A good mind, a scientific preparation, unceasing work, and a boundless ambition, won him a distinguished place in his profession. The many expressions of regard from the people of the community in which he lived and worked attest his worth. He was a man peculiarly adapted to his profession.

"Shortly before his death he had been appointed on the staff of physicians of the 'German-American' hospital of this city. Other honors undoubtedly awaited him, but his too brief life of forty years cut off the possibility." Children:

JOSIAH H.[7] (13639), b. in Westminster, Mass., Feb. 3, 1837. When only seventeen years of age, he entered the employ of the Jacksonville & St. Louis railroad in Illinois in the engineering department, remaining there for two years. Soon afterward he was elected county surveyor of Jersey county. In 1860 he went to California, and received a contract from the Central Pacific for building seven miles of their road. After this he gave considerable attention to mining, and in 1877, became interested in a quartz mine in Tombstone, Arizona, and remained its superintendent until his death.

He m. Nov. 14, 1879, Annie, dau. of Seneca and Sarah (Starr) Daniels, b. in Ballston, N. Y., May 22, 1858. In 1879 he purchased the Daniels' place, containing 1,500 acres, near Lakeville, Cal., and made of it an ideal home. Mr. White was elected to the presidency of the Sonoma and Marin Agricultural society, and well filled that responsible position. Indeed, his sterling qualities of mind and heart commanded the esteem of all with whom he came in contact.

The family moved to Alameda, Cal., in 1894, but still made their summer home at the Lakeville ranch. In social circles Mr. White was a great favorite, and as one of the charter members of the Petaluma Social club, had many old friends in the organization. He d. in Alameda Sept. 23, 1897. CHARLES H.[7] (13641), b. in Westminster, Mass., Sept. 2, 1843; m. in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 12, 1876, Minnie M., dau. of Lemuel and Emeline (Sumner) Martin, b. in Ithaca, N. Y. Her grandfather, George Sumner, was cousin of Hon. Charles Sumner of Massachusetts. Mr. White moved with his parents when a child to Watertown, N. Y. He was educated at the Liberal Institute in Clinton, N. Y., after which he spent five years on his farm in Rodman, N. Y.; then entered the drug store of Sawen & Co., of Watertown, where he learned the business. In 1867, he and his friend and schoolmate, Major D. W. Burdick, formed a partnership in the drug business in Ithaca, and it is said, from that time to his death, Mr. White's interest in affairs concerning village and city never flagged. Thorough in his private business, he was alike thorough in whatever he undertook of a public nature; he was ever the same conscientious and thorough advisor and worker. His work in the Unitarian Church was one of faithful earnestness, in which he bore more than a full measure of responsibility. He was one of the promoters and a large stockholder in the Ithaca Street Railway, and elected president of the corporation in 1891. He also held responsible positions in many other companies formed for the benefit of the city. On November 29, Mr. White, in company with his son, left Ithaca for Brooklyn, N. Y., to spend Thanksgiving with his wife, who was visiting her sister in that city; in Paterson, N. J., there was a fearful railway accident in which he was fatally injured, and died in St. Joseph's Hospital in Paterson, December 2, 1899. His family reside in Ithaca. Child:

Sept. 27, 1834; he m. (2) Sept. 27, 1836, Amelia Crichton of Wheelersburg, Ohio, b. Feb. 10, 1814, and educated in Perthshire, Scotland; she was a descendant of the same family as Admiral Crichton. In 1838, Mr. Beaman moved to Burlington, Ohio. Abolitionism was then spreading rapidly and the church at Burlington had thirty-four members, of whom seventeen were slave-holders, residents of Kentucky and Virginia, just across the Ohio River. Mr. Beaman was an ardent abolitionist, and under his influence the church session dismissed the slave-holding members, and the remaining seventeen adopted an article excluding slave-holders from the church and the pulpit.

He opened an academy in Burlington in 1842, of which he was principal until his removal to Iowa in 1846, going by steamboat down the Ohio River to Cairo, thence up the Mississippi River to Montrose in Lee Co., Iowa. There was no church there, and Mr. Beaman preached in the Government Barracks and afterwards organized a church and erected a house of worship; also organized several churches in the surrounding country. In 1852, he surrendered the Montrose church to another pastor and removed to Croton on the Des Moines River. Aug. 3, 1872, he writes in his diary: "I am now 73; if I live until March, 1873, I intend to resign and preach only when I am able." But on March 4, 1873, he received an urgent call to return to his old church in Montrose and immediately went there, remaining until June, 1875, when, his health failing, although his mental powers were still unimpaired, he, with his wife, moved to Keosauqua, Iowa, and joined the family of their son, where Mr. Beaman d. Oct. 26, 1875, aged seventy-six years, having spent forty-four years in the ministry. Rev. Willis G. Cragg, D. D., now of Chicago, who was one of his warm friends, preached his funeral sermon, saying of him that he was "one of the great soldiers of the cross, who had during his entire ministerial life always been in the front, standing on the high places of the field." Jan. 9, 1797, Josiah Grout[5] (832), b. in Charlestown, N. H., June 9, 1772. They settled in Fairfax, Vt. We find him with the title of general, but do not know how it was won, probably in the state militia of Vermont.

In the war of 1812, he, with the rank of major, was in the command of a regiment to guard the lines in 1813 and 1814. Just before the battle of Plattsburgh, he volunteered, and, in a skirmish with the enemy, the British were beaten and taken prisoners, the commander of which was killed after he surrendered, by Grout's men in consequence of their not understanding the signal, they being green militia. On these occasions "he discharged his duties to the satisfaction of all concerned, and cheerfully participated in every hardship and danger." In 1818 and 1822, we find him brigadier-general of the militia.

His farm was bounded by Lamoille River in the southern part of Franklin Co., now Fairfax, Vt. He filled many town offices and was justice of the peace. She d. in Fairfax, July 22, 1839. He d. Jan. 9, 1853. Gen. Grout was a descendant of Capt. John Grout,[1] who came to this country in his early youth and was a grandson of Sir Richard Grout, an English knight.

William and Hannah (Scarborough) Keyes, b. in Acworth, N. H., Feb. 24, 1774. They remained in Acworth until January, 1800, when they moved to the "Black River Country," settling in Rutland, N. Y., in a log house, six miles from Watertown. They were the fourth family to settle in that then unbroken forest; they remained there until 1809, when they removed to Watertown. He became prominent in politics, and afterward was in the senate in Albany with Silas Wright and Martin Van Buren, and their letters addressed to him are now in possession of his only living representative. He was a very energetic man, both physically and mentally, quick and strong in repartee and action, as is shown by the following from the Keyes Genealogy:

"Micah Sterling, one of the ablest lawyers of Jefferson county, N. Y., where Keyes resided, in a heated political discussion, had been knocked down by Sam Brown, the brother of Gen. Jacob Brown. Shortly after this occurrence, a couple of hogs belonging to Judge Keyes, had broken out into the highway, and been shut up in the Pound. As the Pound Master knew very well that it was an accident, Keyes was indignant; and going to the Pound, without further ceremony, lifted his hogs, which weighed some two hundred pounds apiece, out of the enclosure, and proceeded to drive them home. Quite a number witnessed the performance; and among them, Micah Sterling. As Judge Keyes passed by, driving his pigs before him, Sterling thought it a good opportunity to banter him, and cried out, 'Keyes, I understand that you can handle a hog, better than any man in Jefferson County.' Keyes quick retort was, 'Oh, no! Sterling, not as well as Sam Brown.'"

Judge Keyes was at one time sheriff of Jefferson Co. and an influential member of the Democratic party. He d. in Watertown, May 13, 1834. Mrs. Keyes lived on the homestead in Watertown until her death, Feb. 23, 1855. Children:

ELISHA[6] (14498), b. in Leominster, Mass., Jan. 25, 1778; moved with his parents to Charlestown, N. H., when three years of age; went, when a young man, to Fairfax, Vt., where he bought a homestead, and worked there and in Lower Canada in the potash business. In 1806, went to the State of Ohio and bought two hundred acres of land about one hundred miles south of Marietta, Ohio, for $700, twenty acres under cultivation and one hundred and fifty apple trees. The following anecdote from Mr. Wilder's "History of Leominster" shows that he was ready to do his duty: "On the 19th of April, 1775, a young man by the name of Joshua White was crossing a mill-pond in a boat with two ladies. And while he stopped to listen to the alarm guns that were being fired in the middle of the town, the current had drifted them so near the dam that there was no escape; there was but just time to turn the boat end foremost, and over they all went into the water below.

"But White being strong and meeting no harm,
He took a Miss Wheelock under each arm
And carried them safely ashore,
Then bid them good-by and said nothing more;
But hastening home, he snatched his gun
And traveled off for Lexington."

L. AUGUSTUS Pattridge[7] (14718), b. in Chesterfield, N. H., June 3, 1819; removed with his parents to Peacham, Vt., the following year, where his early life was spent attending the district school and assisting in the labors of the farm, enjoying the sports of the hunt for game was plentiful, the shy partridge, the squirrel and even deer and bear were often met. He early showed a talent for music, and would leave his play to sit by his mother's spinning-wheel to sing with her. While yet a boy he made a violin, on which he played for a time, going to the woods and cutting a tree to get the proper wood, and the only tools at his command to use in its construction was a saw, jack-knife, and a piece of an old scythe. He sold this violin and later he led the choir in the church with another violin, and also his voice. He afterwards mastered the clarionet and for a time was leader of the Peacham brass band. They played at the "June training," which was popular at that time, and helped foster a military spirit, and gave them practical knowledge for future use. The band was also in demand at Commencement, which was the greatest event of the year in the community, for in Peacham was situated the Academy, the chief county school and pride of the people.

He, at one time, by his courage and presence of mind, quieted a panic in the crowded church, when a heavy rumble and an apparent settling of the building, from the cracking of an underpinning stone, caused a wild stampede for the doors. The band occupied the high gallery. He directed them to keep their seats and play, which quieted the people before anyone was injured.

He was a student at the Peacham Academy, also taught the Water Street School, which was a hard school to govern, his future wife was a pupil and stood in much awe of the stern teacher, who was a strict disciplinarian. On attaining his majority, he visited the west in the summer of 1840, stopping for a time with his uncle, Jotham Wood, near Jackson, Mich. The railroad, at this time, only extended fifty miles west of Detroit. When he went on from Jackson, he walked to St. Joseph, Mich., a distance of eighty miles, went by boat to Michigan City, Ind., and again on foot to Chicago. One warm day he walked twenty-four miles, the road-way was sandy, and so heated by the sun that he blistered his feet. He went from Chicago up into the Fox River country which was utterly wild at that time; here he was attacked with fever and ague which few escaped, and returned in poor health to his home in Vermont, but recovered after a few months. The following year, he engaged with his father to work on the farm for five years, at $100 per year; at the close of this period, he purchased the homestead which was a portion of the 400 acres of land, which his grandfather had bought for his two sons, Joseph and Lyman, and where most of his life had been spent.

He married Dec. 19, 1845, Ellen C., oldest daughter of Rufus and Electa (Skeele) Miner, born in Ascott, Lower Canada, Oct. 24, 1825. He had a natural turn and taste for farming and was a reader of agricultural books and journals, beginning with "The Boston Cultivator," and later, "The Scientific American," "The Working Farmer," "The Agriculturist" and the "New York Tribune." From these he gained many ideas, and fearlessly practiced many methods, which were unheard of by his neighbors, notable among which was his "reclaimed swamp," which he had with almost incredible labor, reduced from a wet and boggy thicket of bushes and fallen logs to a rich and productive field, handsome to look at, of which he was justly proud. He was always progressive, being the owner of one of the first two "Wheeler & Wilson" sewing machines ever brought into Caledonia County. It was a beauty, silver-plated, and cost $115, when that sum was as hard to get as $500, now.

The severe, long and cold winters discouraged his efforts at small fruit culture, and in the winter of 1865, he removed to Bureau Co., Ill., where he settled on a farm a few miles south of Buda, and for a number of years devoted his time mostly to the culture of small fruits. While living there, his shoulder was broken, by being dragged by a runaway horse, and he had also a dangerous illness of lung fever. In 1880, he left the farm and moved to the village, where he still cultivated a few acres of small fruits, and took much pride in their quality.

Early in the autumn of 1888, he was stricken with creeping paralysis, and died Dec. 15, of the same year. It was said of him at his funeral, "He lived a brave life and died a brave death." Children:

Lieut.-Col. WILLIAM H. Burt[7] (14741), b. in Westmoreland, N. H., May 24, 1824; m. (1) Oct., 1848, Hannah L. Williams of Amherst, Mass., who d. May 8, 1852. He m. (2) Nov. 8, 1855, Ann Louisa Davis of Dublin, N. H., who is now living in Keene, N. H. He passed his early years on the farm, and enjoyed such advantages for education as were provided by the common schools, supplemented by a few terms in Mt. Cæsar Academy in Swanzey, N. H. He cherished a hope to become qualified for a professional life, either at medicine or law, and directed all his energies to that purpose, but often found the way obscure and discouraging, yet by perseverance he realized his anticipations. He studied law in the office of Hon. Levi Chamberlain in Keene, N. H., and afterward with Gen. James Wilson, formerly of Keene, in San Francisco, Cal., where he was admitted to practice as Attorney and Counselor-at-Law, Feb. 9, 1854, and returned to his native state in Nov., 1855. In the spring of 1856, he went to Minnesota, then a territory, where he engaged in business as a lawyer in Stillwater, and important interests were placed in his care. He was a member of the legislature of Minnesota in 1861-2.

Under the urgent call of President Lincoln, for 600,000 men to reinforce the Union army in August, 1862, he joined the military service. As a recruiting officer for the Seventh Minnesota Regiment Infantry he enlisted a full company of men in five days, and reported forthwith in Fort Snelling, Minn., for duty. He was elected captain and directly given the command of his own Company C and Company I, with orders to move directly to Fort Ripley, Minn., to assist in the defense of that post against Chippewa Indians, who were then harassing the settlers of that frontier. Soon a "Council of Peace," of which Capt. Burt was a member, was convened, whereby peaceful relations were resumed with that tribe, through their Chiefs, and his command (Company C and Company I) was ordered to join their regiment, which had been protecting other parts of the state, suffering from the depredations and cruelties of the Sioux Indians, and were then in Mankato, Minn. His detachment arrived there Nov. 23, and was assigned to duty as guard of the Sioux prisoners, three hundred of which had been sentenced to close confinement, and thirty-nine to death, by a military commission. Company C was given the post of honor on the day of execution, Dec. 26, 1862, and Capt. Burt as "officer of the day" received much credit for his services. Again he, with his company, were called upon to perform the somewhat perilous duty of escorting the three hundred Indian prisoners, in the spring of 1863 to Rock Island, Ill. by steamboat, and returning they joined in the summer campaign against the Sioux in Dakota. With a small detachment Capt. Burt was ordered to Devil's Lake to reconnoitre for stray Indian bands, and there captured Wowinapa, the son of Little Crow, the powerful Sioux Chief, in the massacre of 1862 in Minnesota. The entire command of Gen. Sibley returned to Fort Snelling, Sept. 16, 1863, and the Seventh Minnesota regiment was soon ordered south to aid in the great work of suppressing the Rebellion. In St. Louis they were retained during the winter for guard and escort duty. Here Capt. Burt received a commission as major of his regiment, dated Nov. 6, 1863. In April, the regiment was sent forward to Paducah, Ky., thence, June 19, was ordered to Memphis, and assigned to the "Third Brigade, First Division, Sixteenth Army Corps," under Gen. A. J. Smith. From this time, for this regiment, the service was very hard; long marches, coupled with severe deprivations and frequent engagements with the Confederate army, following the fortunes of "The Sixteenth Army Corps," which was expected to hasten hither and thither, to strengthen the forces of every Union general in want of troops, often taking the brunt of the battle upon their arrival. Thus going from Memphis to Tupelo, Miss., Oxford and Tallahatchie, to Arkansas and Missouri, by forced marches pursuing the Confederate General Price and his command through mud and snow, fording icy rivers, hungry and weary, reaching St. Louis and hurried on to assist General Thomas in his great battles at Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 15 and 16, 1864, following Hood in his flight through Tennesee; then to Eastport, Miss., and New Orleans, and on to Dauphin Island, where the 16th Army Corps was reorganized for the great siege of Mobile, arriving there March 20, 1865. They were at once sent forward to invest the Spanish Fort, which was reduced Apr. 8, 1865. The Seventh Minnesota regiment, under Major Burt, did garrison duty from that time till July 20, at Montgomery and Selma, Ala., when they started homeward and were mustered out of the military service at Fort Snelling, Minn., Aug. 16, 1865.

Originally possessed of a strong constitution, the exposures of army life, during three years of continuous active duty as a soldier, exhausted the vitality of Major Burt, causing an illness from which he did not recover. He d. Mar. 15, 1866, at Worcester, Mass., at the home of his only surviving sister, leaving a widow. His military services were highly appreciated by his superior officers. He received the commission of Brevet Lieutenant Colonel United States Volunteers, from President Johnson, for gallant and meritorious service at the siege of Spanish Fort, Mobile Harbor, Ala.

She m. Dec. 15, 1874, Vine D. Simar, civil engineer, engaged as assistant engineer to Col. F. U. Farquhar, corps of engineers; he was located in St. Paul, where they remained until 1885. In 1886, he engaged with the Santa Fe Railway Company as locating engineer, continuing for three years, during which time the family residence was almost anywhere in the then rapidly developing south-western country, the field of operation being Kansas, Indian Territory, New Mexico, and Colorado. During the next three years an engagement as chief engineer of a company which had in hand the construction of a line of railway in New Mexico and Colorado, made the residence of the family between Chicago and South-western Colorado. During this engagement, one trip abroad was made in the interest of the company. In 1892–3, Mr. Simar was commissioned U. S. Deputy Surveyor, and engaged in the survey of public lands in Northern Minnesota, at the same time making an examination of the Lake of the Woods mineral region, where some valuable interests were acquired. In much of the travel incident to such duties, Mrs. Simar has been a companion from canoe and camp-life in the north-west to life in the saddle in the south-west.

During the past four years, mining interests in Colorado have occupied much time and attention, where Mr. Simar, as one of a syndicate, has charge of extensive interests which will result in making that state their future home.

Mrs. Simar is an earnest and active church-woman, a communicant of the Episcopal Church, and like her father, the late Dr. Charles Lord, giving much attention to good works, prominent in society and liked by all; her friends are numbered by those she meets.

JANE S. Jenkins[8] (14832), b. in Alleghany, Pa., Sept. 21, 1862. She graduated from Bishop Bowman Institute and the State Normal College in California, Pa. She taught school for a few years and then turned her attention to the study of art; she is now a teacher of drawing and china painting in Alleghany. She is also a member of the Pittsburg Art School of Design, and at its annual exhibit of oil painting in February, 1898, was awarded the first prize, a valuable gold medal. Miss Jenkins has also designed and painted a French china plate for the Daughters of the American Revolution of Pittsburg and Alleghany. In the centre of the plate is painted the ancient spinning wheel, and on the rim in gold letters are the words, "Daughters of the American Revolution." From the wheel, pointing outward from the centre, are five distaffs used in spinning flax in "ye olden time," and surrounding each are hanks of flax. Small, but perfect golden stars surround the outer edge of the wheel. Then in connection comes a narrow circle of gold, after that is a shaded circle of deep blue, one inch wide, on which are thirty-two larger stars, making together with the smaller ones already mentioned, one for each state.

FRIEND W. Jenkins, Jr.[8] (14833), b. in Alleghany, Pa., June 26, 1865. He entered the Western University of Pennsylvania in 1874; the Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., in 1882, where he received the commission of Ensign in 1888. He also made a name for himself in Naval circles by devising a formula for the computation of the trajectory of a projectile, and for his work in connection with machine guns. He was a Lieutenant on the ill-fated "Maine," where he lost his life by the explosion of that majestic warship in Havana Harbor, Feb. 15, 1898. It was said that the last seen of Lieut. Jenkins, he was running forward after the explosion, under the evident impression that the ship was treacherously attacked, to take his station at the forecastle six-inch gun, which he commanded. It was many days before his body was recovered from the wreck, when it was taken to Alleghany where it arrived on the morning of Mar. 30. All the honor that could be bestowed on a hero was tendered this American martyr. He was buried with military honors, surrounded by the family and classmates.

15396. Moses P.,[8] a lawyer in Cambridge, Mass.

Rev. JAMES[7] (15380), b. in Palmyra, Me., Aug. 4, 1821. He was a feeble child, suffering greatly from weakness of the eyes; a feeble, nervous and partially blind boy. He says: "And not until I was sixteen years old, when my health and strength greatly improved, and my eyes became quite natural, could I read a single verse in the Testament without resting my eyes. I felt keenly the fact that I was behind my school-mates in education." At the age of nineteen his father gave him his time and a suit of clothes, also three dollars to pay his tuition at the Academy in St. Albans, Me., and six days' rations of bread to take with him every Monday morning for three months, as he walked five miles to the school. At the close of the term he received from the preceptor, C. F. Allen, a certificate to teach the common branches, and the winter following, he taught school. At the close of this term of school teaching, he again attended the Academy five weeks; then worked for a time in a saw-mill on the Penobscot River, where he met with a severe accident, which resulted in a permanent weakness in his left foot. He then attended school in Reedfield, Me., for one term, where, he says, "I wore old clothes while my classmates wore new; I lived three months on corn-meal pudding, prepared by myself, and a few raw apples." With the close of this term also closed his school studies, having attended High School in all, twenty-nine weeks. At the age of fifteen, he was baptized and united with the Christian Church; but at the age of twenty, he had buried himself in the spirit of study and school teaching, when upon his return home in the spring of 1841, he was lead by a conversation with his mother to give his attention to the second coming of Christ, and soon felt that his work was to teach the Scriptures, his knowledge of which seemed very meagre. His first work was done in Troy, Me., where he taught his last school. He continued in the work, studying and preaching from place to place, having much success.

He m. Aug. 30, 1846, Ellen Gould, dau. of Robert Harmon, b. in Gorham, Me., Nov. 26, 1827; a few years after her birth the family moved to Portland, where her early life was spent, and where she and Mr. White first met. Although young in years, she was a devoted Christian and a laborer in the cause of Christ in public and from house to house. They continued to labor together through the States of New England, and later in the State of New York, and though her health was often very poor, yet strength was given her for much labor.

Mr. White began the publication of the "Advent Review" and "Sabbath Herald" in Paris, Me. In 1852, they moved to Rochester, N. Y., where he continued to publish the "Review." In 1854-5, Mr. White's health became so feeble, that he resolved to free himself from the responsibilities of publishing, which had been urged upon him. He was editor and proprietor of the "Review and Herald," until it reached Vol. VII, No. 9. No one ever asked him to give the "Review, Instructor," and the publication of books, into other hands, or leave the position of editor. No one suggested anything of the kind to him. It was his choice that he might be relieved, and that the office might be established beyond the influence of those men who had cried, Speculation! He never claimed the property at the office which had been donated to be used for the benefit of the cause. He called upon the church to take the office in Rochester, and establish it where they pleased, and suggested that it be managed by a publishing committee, and that no one connected with it should have a personal interest in it. As no others claimed the privilege, the brethren in Michigan opened the way for the office to be removed to Battle Creek."

About this time Mrs. White writes as follows, which appears in the "Review" for Jan. 10, 1856: "We have felt the power and blessing of God for a few weeks past. He has been very merciful. He has wrought in a very wonderful manner for my husband. We have brought him to our great Physician in the arms of our faith, and like blind Bartimeus, have cried, 'Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy upon us,' and we have been comforted. The healing power of God has been felt. All medicine has been laid aside and we rely alone upon the arm of our great Physician. We are not yet satisfied. Our faith says, entire restoration. We have seen the salvation of God, yet we expect to see and feel more. I believe without a doubt that my husband will yet be able to sound the last note of warning to the world. For weeks past our peace has been like a river. Our souls triumph in God. Gratitude, unspeakable gratitude, fills my soul for the tokens of God's love which we have of late seen and felt. We feel like dedicating ourselves anew to God."

"The publishing work of the Seventh-day Adventists was begun by Elder White as a personal enterprise, when as yet the believers were too few and too poor to afford much assistance. Working it up through many privations and sufferings and alive to the importance of the work to which he had devoted his energies and his life, his interest was not all removed from it when an Association was formed to take the printing office from his hands. For years he continued to act as publisher and editor, as well as preacher, besides exercising a general supervision of the denominational work through the entire field. These many and increasing duties brought upon him a great amount of labor, which resulted in both physical and mental prostration, from which he did not fully recover for about two years. * * * * * * * * * *

"At the earnest solicitation of Elder and Mrs. White, in 1874 an Educational Society was organized, ground was purchased in the City of Battle Creek, and a good brick building was erected, of three stories from the basement. The school was incorporated under the name of Battle Creek College."

He continued to labor and preach until July 31, when he was prostrated by sickness, and d. Aug. 6, 1881. Mrs. White, though in feeble health, and bereft of him by whose side she had labored for more than thirty-six years, again took up her work, and besides continuing to write largely for the press and maintaining a constantly extending personal correspondence, she has attended the camp meetings in all parts of our land. During the years 1885 and '87 she visited Europe, laboring in England, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, France, Denmark, Norway and Sweden. In Basel, Switzerland, she attended the Swiss Conference and the European Missionary Council of the denomination, and throughout her stay in Europe took a deep interest in the mission established in that ancient city — one of the centers of the Reformation in the sixteenth century. From Basel, frequent visits were made to various points in Switzerland and the surrounding countries. Three times she went to the north countries — Denmark, Norway and Sweden — and in Moss, Norway, in June, 1887, attended the first campmeeting ever held by the Seventh-day Adventists in Europe. She visited Italy also three times and spent several weeks among the Vaudois in Torre Pellice, in the Waldesian Valleys. Though in all the European countries except England, she had to speak through an interpreter, her labors excited a deep interest, and resulted in much good. Mrs. White was accompanied in her European travels by her youngest son and his family. They have since spent several years in New South Wales, Australia. They were engaged in mission or educational work in the Avondale School, Cooranbong, New South Wales. In 1900, Mrs. White returned to the United States, settling in St. Helena, Cal. Children:

BETSEY Weston[6] (15432), b. in Canaan, Me., Mar. 5, 1785; m. (1) May 3, 1806, Amos, son of Joseph Baker, who came from England and settled in Dunstable, Mass. Amos was b. in 1764, and when thirteen years old enlisted in the Revolution and served to the close of the war, when he was one of Washington's Life Guards. When discharged he had not money enough to get home, and stopped to earn some by the way. After he reached home he married and settled in New Hampshire, but his young wife soon died. How he picked up an education is not known, but when about forty years old, he went to Canaan, Me., and taught district school and singing school; married Miss Weston and settled there, enduring all the hardships of a new country. She had a hundred and fifty acres of land from her father's estate, but it was some time before they had a comfortable home upon it. Their clothing was made from cloth made in the home, and every fall the shoemaker came to the house to make the shoes for the family. Mr. Baker having been a soldier in early life, he had a taste for military, and though nearly fifty years of age, enlisted near the close of the war of 1812, but his health giving out, he died suddenly in the army near Buffalo, Oct. 7, 1814.

Mrs. Baker was left with four children, the oldest aged ten. The farm was let at the halves. She used her two wheels, one for spinning flax, the other for cotton and wool. She wove the yarn into cloth to make their clothes. Her son, Judge Baker of Hallowell, Me., says: "My mother owned a share in a social library kept at Skowhegan Bridge. I remember my father and mother sitting up nights to read a volume about Catherine of Russia. The books I read from the library were Shakespeare's Plays and Hume's History of England and others. I think there were no novels in the library. There were perhaps two hundred books. I borrowed "Pilgrim's Progress" and Goldsmith's "Animated Nature," three or four volumes of descriptions of animals, birds, etc., illustrated. A single tallow candle on a table served for several persons to read, study and work by." She m. (2) ——, Samuel Lewis and lived in China, Me., where she d. Mar. 21, 1871. Children:

ABNER Coburn[7] (15445), b. in Canaan (now Skowhegan), Me., Mar. 22, 1803. Though employed in early life on his father's farm, he spent several terms in Bloomfield Academy, and in 1825 became a surveyor. The knowledge obtained in this profession led him into the lumber business, which he followed for more than half a century with ability and success. He began to take an interest in railway enterprises in 1854, and became director or president of several important lines. In 1838 he was elected as a whig to the Maine legislature, and again in 1840. In 1852, when General Scott was the whig candidate for president, he was on the electoral ticket. In 1855 he was a member of Governor Morrill's council, and in 1857 held the same office under Governors Hamlin and Williams. In 1860 he was an elector on the Lincoln ticket, and chosen governor of Maine in 1862, filling the office during most of the year 1863, and supporting the national government with devotion and fidelity. His last public service was rendered in 1884, when he was one of the Republican electors and was made their chairman. Governor Coburn was active in philanthropic movements, and evinced a practical interest in higher education. He was president of the managers of the College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts, and vice-president of the board of trustees of Colby University. He gave largely in his lifetime to aid schools and colleges and the building of churches, especially in connection with the Baptist denomination, to which he was warmly attached. He bequeathed to various educational, religious and charitable institutions over eight hundred thousand ($800,000), including two hundred thousand ($200,000) to Colby University, one hundred thousand ($100,000) to the Maine State College of Agriculture, two hundred thousand ($200,000) to the American Baptist Home Missionary Society, and one hundred thousand ($100,000) to the American Baptist Missionary Union. halves and he worked for his uncle some two miles distant until about fourteen years of age, when it was decided he should learn the printing business. He was sent to Hallowell in April, 1821. The next day began his labors with Col. Marsters of the "Hallowell Gazette," in whose family he boarded for six years. He said: "I was a country boy, bashful and awkward. In due time I learned to 'set type,' being the youngest apprentice, I built the fire, swept the office, filled the lamps and carried round the papers. . . . Two of us apprentices, thinking to improve our education, agreed one winter to rise before day, go to the office, light the fire, and study arithmetic and geography an hour before breakfast. This we did for several weeks, braving the cold and darkness.

"When I was about seventeen years of age, I began to write for the newspapers, first for the 'Hallowell Gazette,' but afterwards more or less for other papers. My writings were printed in the papers, whatever their merit may have been. Of course they were not very finished productions. The Gazette was discontinued when I became of age, and I was employed as editor of the 'American Advocate.' In 1829, S. W. Robinson and I purchased the 'American Advocate' of Mr. Calvin Spaulding. We were both inexperienced and agreed to give much more than the paper was worth. Robinson was a lawyer, and a partner of Peleg Sprague, member of Congress. The plan was for Robinson to be the political editor, and I was to be the local and business manager. But Robinson was too busy to give much attention to the paper. We had a diminishing list of subscribers, the tendency being toward Augusta.

"In a few years the seat of the government of Maine was removed from Portland to Augusta, the State House was built, and the legislature met there. Luther Severance, editor of the 'Kennebec Journal,' reported for his paper and I reported for the Advocate. My method was to catch the proceedings as they took place, and the substance of the speeches made. I had a measure of success in this and followed this method as long as I reported."

Having been for several years elected one of the town school committee but declined serving, in 1834, he was elected and took the office, and while attending to the duties of the office he met and formed the acquaintance of her, who afterward became his wife and helpmeet in the true sense of the word. He m. Nov. 19, 1835, Sarah M., dau. of Ephraim and Salome (Dennis) Lord, b. in Hallowell, June 21, 1814. Her parents were both born in Ipswich, Mass., he Aug. 11, 1771, and she Dec. 8, 1776. They were m. Oct. 16, 1796. He d. June 2, 1824, and she Oct. 20, 1854. Sarah M. was the youngest of nine children and before her marriage was a teacher in a private school in Hallowell, where they continued to reside after their marriage. In 1836, he sold out the newspaper business and commenced the study of law. While engaged in this study, he was commissioned Justice of the Peace, and filled the duty of this office, was admitted to practice law in 1840. In 1842, he was a member of the legislature; and in 1844, on the judiciary committee; in 1852, was a member of the first common council, when Hallowell obtained a city charter, and served for two years, and was then chosen alderman, was in the city government in all eighteen years. In February, 1855, he was appointed Judge of Probate by Gov. A. P. Morrill. The same year the law was changed and the office made elective, and he was re-elected for twenty-six years. In 1854, he procured a charter for the Hallowell Savings Institution and was chosen treasurer, which office he filled for more than forty years. After about twenty years he had occasional help from time to time, then for some ten years employed a clerk, and later had an assistant treasurer. Although with these many duties, leading a very busy and useful life, he found time for social reading with his family and many drives and excursions in company with his wife.

In 1879, he visited Europe and again in 1883, in company with his grandson, R. H. Rice, making an extended tour in Scotland, England, Ireland, Wales, and spent a week in Paris. He attended for several years the Unitarian meeting and was united with the church, later saw reason to change his views and in 1844, united with the Methodist Church in Hallowell. He was appointed class leader and held the office for more than forty years, when he resigned on account of impaired hearing.

He was ever interested in the promotion of temperance, being temperate himself even to the exclusion of tea and coffee, using first in his own home cold water and later hot water, and his length of days and continued health show plainly that it was no disadvantage. He was ever interested in the promotion of knowledge and education. In 1897, he was one of the committee to superintend the erection of the last extension of the Hubbard Free Library of Hallowell and Jan. 25, 1898, delivered the address at the dedicatory exercises at the opening of the West Wing.

In Mr. Baker's "Old Times and How We Lived," he says: "I am conscious that in the course of my life I have had many privileges and blessings, more than fall to the share of some others. For these I render thanks to our Heavenly Father. If I have done any good in the world, I only wish it had been more. None need be told how much I owe to my wife, the mother of my children, my companion, counsellor and bosom friend for more than sixty years.

"Whatever troubles or trials I may have had in life, I have had always peace and love at home. We have had no family quarrels, no alienations. But she has gone and I am left alone for the brief remainder of my life."

She d. in Hallowell, Apr. 21, 1898.

He lived in Canaan, Me., where he was an active and influential member of the Baptist Church, almost to the close of his long life. He lived on a farm which he probably redeemed from the forest, about a mile and a half from the bridge on the Madison road. His nephew, Eben Weston, says of him: "John was a quiet man, who minded his own business, like all the rest of my uncles, in due time he built a two-story house. I believe that more of his descendants are now in business in Skowhegan, than of any of those early settlers, who have been in these sketches." (Early Settlers in Canaan, No. II)

(When he was eighty years of age, he replied to an agent who wished to secure for him a pension, "Sir, I'd scorn to receive pay from my country, for services I never rendered.") In 1815, having buried one sister and leaving one sister and the baby brother with relatives in Vermont, he takes three sisters and a brother, with no conveyance but two yoke of three-year-old steers and a sled, to convey themselves and their household furniture to their new home in Western New York. They went across the state to Canandaigua, where he had an uncle; stopping there for a short rest, he continued his journey to Centerville, Alleghany Co., where he made a home for them on a farm, remaining there fifteen years. In 1822, he returned to Vermont on foot and married Oct. 13, 1822, Rachel, dau. of Levi and Lovina (Branch) Walker, b. in Whiting, Vt., May 1, 1797. He returned to New York on foot, leaving his bride to follow in the spring with his sister Laura and her husband. In 1830, he removed to Fredonia, N. Y., and later to Columbus, Pa., where he was post-master for seven years and justice of the peace about twenty years. He was a farmer through life and in his home and heart there was always room for the homeless. Mrs. White d. in Columbus, Dec. 22, 1864; he d. Jan, 27, 1878. Children:

THOMAS[6] (15940), b. in Leicester, Vt., Aug. 1, 1804; his parents dying when he was about eight years of age, he was cared for by his older brother, Mark C., who by the aid of kind friends kept the family of eight children together in their Vermont home until the winter of 1815 he sought a home in the wilds of western New York, accompanied by Thomas and his three sisters, one having died after the death of her parents, and the two younger children remaining with friends in Vermont. They first settled in Centreville, Alleghany Co., N. Y., on a hill farm, which in later years was owned by Gregory Metcalf. Thomas later engaged in mercantile business, first in Freedom and later in Sandusky, a village of that town, pursuing this business for some years, when he turned his attention to farming as a source of better health. During his forty years residence in Freedom, there were but few years his life was not devoted to the public as town or county official. He m. in 1828, Martha, dau. of William and Esther Sparks, b. in Onondaga Co., N. Y., July 10, 1804. Left motherless at the age of ten years, her thoughts early turned to a Saviour's love and care, which was so complete it led her all the way and caused a life of consecration to the Master. J. WELLINGTON[7] (15965), b. in Sandusky, N. Y., Sept. 17, 1831; was educated in Randolph Academy and the common schools of his native town. At his majority he turned his steps westward, stopping for a time in Iowa, and finally, in 1857, began overland freighting between Leavenworth City and the cities of the Rocky Mountains, which he followed until the railroads were completed through that section, when he made his residence in San Antonio, Texas, and remained there until his death Mar. 31, 1892, leaving behind evidence of his desire to depart and be with Christ, which is far better.

MARCELLUS C.[7] (15966), b. in Sandusky, N. Y., Apr. 14, 1835; educated in the common schools and academies of that place, and in Springville School, having a strong desire for an education, which had to be given up on account of failing health. He m. Jan. 2, 1858, Amelia, dau. of Nathan and Sally Lewis of Sandusky, b. in Rushford, N. Y., Mar. 23, 1835. In 1862, having buried their two children in one short week, their home was for a time broken up, and not until Feb. 28, 1866, did they again set up a permanent home, and then in Rushford, where he was engaged in the mercantile business. He was an earnest devoted Christian; we are indebted to him for this branch of the family. His great grandfather, Elisha White, having left Lancaster, in 1783, we had been unable to obtain anything later than the baptism of his children. In 1899 I received a letter from Mr. White, in which he gave me his ancestry, making a connection between his work and mine, for he was trying to trace ancestry. Though in poor health, and a part of the time suffering from a severe inflamation of the eyes, yet he worked persistently until he had interested others and completed the work. I am very glad he could have and enjoy the first volume of my work. He d. in his home in Rushford, Apr. 8, 1901. Children:

15997. Horace K.,[8] b. Apr. 20, 1860; d. Apr. 1, 1862.

15999. May Bell,[8] +.

WILMOT V.[8] (15972), b. in Fort Recovery, Ohio, Feb. 3, 1849; moved with his parents to Columbus, Pa., where, his mother dying in 1861, he remained with his grandparents and Uncle Lucius until 1865, when he went to Wilmington, Ohio, to the home of his mother's brother, A. C. Diboll. Here he attended school two years, then entered a machine shop to learn the machinist's trade. Two years later he went to Cincinnati, going into the employ of the Ohio & Mississippi R. R. Co., remaining some ten years in the Motive Power Department, becoming quite able in construction and operation of locomotives, a portion of the time being stationed in Louisville, Ky., a terminal of the road. Mr. White left their company in 1878, and has since been engaged in constructive engineering in power and electric work, and for many years has been a steam expert, employed principally among the cotton mills of the southern states. He is regarded as a mechanical engineer of exceptional ability, often being called into consultation with men of national reputation. He m. Sept. 23, 1875, Dolly Milburn, dau. of Isaac and Sarah (Houston) Robb, b. near Hillsboro, Ohio, July 18, 1849. She so earnestly applied herself to her school work that she very creditably passed a county examination for public schools, and taught her first term before her sixteenth birthday. She showed her love and aptitude for this work with the children and rapidly advanced until she competed successfully with the oldest male teachers of her county. It was while she was living in Hillsboro, and a member of the Presbyterian Church there that the temperance crusade burst upon that quiet old aristocratic town (Dec. 23, 1873). She unhesitatingly joined the ranks in response to no uncertain call. Ever since that time, she has been identified with the temperance reform work. For several years she has been State Superintendent of the Department of Mercy of the Ohio W. C. T. U., with such success that the Audobon Society of the State of Ohio has very cordially invited her to become one of its honorary advisors. As she has regarded her home duties paramount to all else, her philanthropic work has often called for self-denial in the enjoyment of the social world. They reside in Cincinnati, where they are members and workers in the Presbyterian Church. Children:

16000. Irene Robb,[9] b. in Jeffersonville, Ind., Sept. 8, 1876; her parents soon going to Cincinnati, where she graduated from Hughes High School in 1897 and from the Normal School in 1899. She is now connected with the public schools of the city, and thoroughly enjoys teaching, in which she has been very successful. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church and an earnest worker in church and Sabbath School.

16001. Inez Milburn,[9] b. near Hillsboro, Ohio, Oct. 11, 1878; removing with her parents to Cincinnati, she was educated in the public schools. During her course in Hughes High School, she stood high in all her studies, especially in the languages, receiving at graduation, 1898, high distinction in Latin and French. As a candidate for the degree of A. B., she is continuing her studies in the University of Cincinnati, majoring in letters. She is a member of the class of 1902, and is active in her efforts in behalf of the Y. W. C. A. and kindred organizations; also a member of the Presbyterian Church.

LURA A.[8] (15973), b. in Columbus, Pa., Dec. 2, 1850. Her mother dying when she was eleven years of age, she tried to fill that mother's place to her younger sisters, and to the surprised comments on her devotion to them, she said: "I must; they have no mother." After the death of her father, she, with her younger sisters, spent some years in the family of her grandfather White, attending school until qualified to teach, which profession she followed until her marriage

TILLEY[5] (659), b. in Lancaster, Mass., Sept. 3, 1736; m. (1) in Lancaster, int. pub. Oct. 1, 1761 with Katurah Soames of Harvard, Mass. They resided for a time in Lancaster, then we find Tilley White in Addison, Me., where he m. (2) Tamson Willey. In those days when there was little travel and no letter writing, it was thought by Tilley's first children, who remained with their uncles, brothers of their father, that their father had died when they were young; but in his father's will written in 1797, he says: "To my son Tilley, one dollar, if he come for it within one year," which shows very plainly that he supposed his son Tilley to be living. Then on the Muster Rolls of Sea Coast Defense, we find Tilley White a private in Capt. Jabez West's company from Oct. 19, to Dec. 6, 1776, also in Capt. Daniel Sullivan's company, Col. Benjamin Foster's regiment, time of service one month, eight days; discharged Oct. 11, 1777, on duty in Machias. He settled in Addison, Me., where he d. Feb. 14, 1810. His wife Tamson d. "He was a descendant of George Hubbard,[1] of Glastonbury, Somersetshire, England, who settled first in Wethersfield, Conn., upon coming to New England. His line was John,[2] Jonathan,[3] Thomas,[4] Nathan,[5] Thomas.[6] Thomas Hubbard,[7] was a man of fine presence, tall, athletic and well proportioned. He inherited the farm of his grandfather, Nathan Hubbard, of Groton, where he m. Lois for his second wife. She was a woman of great decision of character, highly intellectual, with all the culture afforded by the schools of those days, to which were added the refining and chastening influences of a beautiful religious life. I remember what a charm there was in her society, and how it was sought by the wise and good, clergymen as well as laymen."

I find this beautiful tribute to Mrs. Hubbard's memory in the Hubbard Genealogy, compiled by her late grandson, L. P. Hubbard of Greenwich, Conn., and it is to that work I am indebted for many of the facts which will follow.

Lancaster, Aug. 21, 1727. Capt. Timothy Houghton with his wife and three children left Boston, Mass., Thursday, July 30, 1759, and arrived in Chester, Lunenburg Co., Nova Scotia, Aug. 4. Captain Houghton began soldiering young and had seen much service. We find him in April to November, 1754, on the eastern frontier in Captains Osgood and Marwin's companies in Col. John Winslow's regiment. In the Crown Point Expedition Aug. 9, 1755, he was adjutant in Col. Samuel Willard's regiment. In 1756, Captain Houghton of Col. Jonathan Bagley's command led a company largely recruited by his lieutenant from Waltham and Newton, Mass. While in the east Captain Houghton saw Nova Scotia for the first time and subsequently obtained one hundred thousand acres of land for himself and fifty-two others. He settled in Chester, where many of his descendants are now living, and many have migrated to all parts of the world. Captain Houghton d. in Halifax, Nova Scotia, May 10, 1780, of small-pox. ANNIE Vaughan[8] (17156), b. in Chester, Nova Scotia, May 2, 1800; m. Apr. 28, 1818, Peter, son of Michael and Hannah (Weiler) Keizer and grandson of George, the emigrant, who came from Germany to Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, in 1753. Peter was b. Jan. 1, 1795. They lived in Chester. He d. May 27, 1879, in West Chester, where his widow Annie d. Aug. 19, 1880. In the History and Genealogy of the Houghton family, we find the following in regard to this family:

"During one of the Indian raids, aided and abetted by the French, (Acadians), one of the Germain settlers of Lunenburg, George Keizer, lost his life. When the massacres seemed to have ceased, George believed the time propitious to build on his grant in the North-west, some four miles from Lunenburg Town, and on a day when his house was nearly finished, he was suddenly surrounded by the Indians, who had watched his operations, whom he discovered none too soon, and fleeing for his life with the howling devils after him, he reached Lunenburg exhausted, where he died nine days after, but whether from wounds or exhaustion is not known by the writer. Perhaps there are those living who can tell? George had four children, Michael, John, Jacob and Mary, who married John Scweiheimer son of Philip the original grantee of that name; John and Jacob settled at Rosebay and Kingsbury. Michael was five years old on their arrival at Lunenburg in 1753; he married Hannah Weiler about the year 1770, obtaining a considerable grant of land at West Chester he removed thence where he died in 1848, being about one hundred years old. Michael, following the example of his predecessors became wealthy. The lands once held by him bordering on Chester Bay are now divided into a dozen farms having almost gone out of the family besides land situated on the Windsor road once owned by him, is now held by others. Michael built and owned the first brig ever built at Chester Bay. At one time he owned two brigs and a schooner which he sent annually to Labrador where he owned salmon fishing berths. Being a navigator himself, he often went there as master of one of his vessels. The salmon were so abundant in those days that full cargoes were nearly always obtained and thus swelling his coffer at every trip he soon amassed a fortune, but misfortune soon overtook him. One after the other of his vessels were lost, his roomy house, fine for those days, at West Chester, burnt to the ground and the law-suit with Capt. Jacob Millett, his son-in-law, nearly ruined him, so that when his will was made, only moderate bequests were obtained by his sons aud daughters. His children were John and George who died young; Jacob married Lucy Vaughan; Michael married Susan Sawlor; Peter married Annie Vaughan; Henry married Elizabeth Hiltz (Hildz); Sarah married Jacob Millett; Lucy married George Rafuse (Rufus) and Hannah married Peter Hiltz. The name 'Keizer' spelt only once in the original grant 'Keizzer' is more frequently spelt as above, though recently for brevity thus, 'Kizer.' The origin of the word is from the Greek 'Cæsar,' in German, 'Kaiser,' pronounced (Kizer) and in Holland spelt 'Keizer.'"

TRYPHENA Keizer[9] (17365), b. in West Chester, Nova Scotia, Nov. 29, 1844; m. Jan. 20, 1862, William Vaughan, b. in West Chester, Aug. 4, 1842. He is the son of David, grandson of Anthony, a United Empire Loyalist, who together with his two brothers moved to Chester, Nova Scotia. David and John left Chester and settled in Quaco, New Brunswick, where they engaged in shipbuilding and became wealthy, where their descendants are to-day. The Vaughans first came to Massachusetts whence they departed, settling in Virginia early in the seventeenth century. Rowland was probably progenitor of this family. The Vaughans are of Welsh descent, the name means "Little." Tradition has it that a David Vaughan was at one time King of Wales. Descendants of Rowland moved to Rhode Island, four of the seven brothers who came to Rhode Island remained there, and the above three as stated, came to Chester. Capt. J. A. Vaughan, brother of William, and master of a United States steamship plying between New York city and the West Indies, narrowly escaped a Spanish warship during the present Civil war between Cuba and Spain. Captain

Vaughan's ship was fired on by the Spanish warship, but escaped without injury. Anthony, the original settler, had been an officer in New England, and his accoutrements still remain in the family. Colonel Vaughan of a collateral branch of the family, and son of the Lieutenant-Governor of New Hampshire, was the hero of Louisburg, May 13, 1745, being largely instrumental in the capture of that supposed impregnable stronghold by the New Englanders. The Vaughans have always been a modest and unassuming people. Children:

Mr. Holman early manifested a fondness for books making the most possible out of his meagre common school advantages. In 1827, he attended the Kimball Union Academy in Meriden, N. H., and in 1828, he went to Chesterfield Academy. From thence he went to Keene, N. H. to reside, that he might still enjoy the opportunity of acquiring a more practical knowledge of mathematics and various other academic branches, which he always considered the best part of his education, under the instruction of Rev. Dr. Barstow. At length the age and infirmities of his father demanded his return to the old home in Roxbury to assist in the various duties of the farm. He always manifested a deep interest in the cause of education, reform and religious movements; his ballot was cast against slavery, in favor of freedom, home and country. In 1837, he moved with his family to Marlboro, and engaged in the manufacture of chairs and pails, afterward turning his attention to the wheelwright business. Mrs. Holman was a lady of ability, culture and moral worth. She pursued a course of study in the Belchertown Academy, and previous to her marriage, taught school in Keene with marked success. She d. In 1846, he bought the Charles McCollester place, where they resided until 1863. In 1867, they removed to North Lawrence, N. Y., where he was engaged in manufacturing pails, and later to Keene, N. H. Children:

18943. Oliver S. Tenney,[9] +.
18944. Ada P. Tenney,[9] b. Sept. 22, 1848; d. Nov. 10, 1864.

SULLIVAN H. McCollester[8] (18841), b. in Marlboro, N. H., Dec. 18, 1826. His youth was spent like many New England boys, working on a farm and attending school in winter. In his fifteenth year he attended a select school and afterward Mt. Cæsar Seminary in Swanzey, N. H., Dublin Select School, Winchendon (Mass.) Academy, Jaffrey Academy, and Melrose Seminary, Brattleboro, Vt., where he fitted for college. When eighteen years old, he commenced teaching his first school in Richmond, receiving for his services nine dollars a month. He entered Norwich (Vt.) University in the winter of 1848 and graduated in the summer of 1851, having finished the full classical course. He entered Cambridge Divinity School and studied there two years with the intention of entering the Christian ministry, when he took charge of Walpole Academy. In the meantime he married Nov. 23, 1852, in Dummerston, Vt., Sophia F., daughter of Joel and Fannie M. (Duncan) Knight, b. in Dummerston, Oct. 12, 1829. She was a successful teacher and aided him in his work. In 1853, he took charge of Mt. Cæsar Seminary, where for nearly five years he labored incessantly doing double duty, teaching and preaching, being held in grateful remembrance there for his efforts in behalf of education, morality and religion. From Swanzey he removed to Westmoreland, and took charge of the Universalist Society there and also in West Chesterfield, also teaching a select school a portion of the time. He was soon elected to the office of school commissioner for Cheshire Co., which office he held until 1859. From Westmoreland, he was called to take charge of Westbrook Seminary near Portland, Me., in 1861. He remained there nearly eight years and raised the institution into a flourishing condition. In the summer of 1866, in company with his wife, he visited Europe, remaining until the spring of 1867, visiting Ireland, Scotland, England, Belgium, France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy. He was delighted with the varied and sublime scenery of the Alps and spent several weeks there. In the spring of 1867, he returned to his school with fresh energy and his mind invigorated and expanded by what he had observed and studied. He remained in the seminary until July, 1868, when, in company with Rev. John S. Lee, D. D., he made his second tour of Europe, extending his travels to Egypt, Palestine, Turkey and Greece. He visited many of the cities where he stopped on his first tour, but spent less time in those, as his chief object was to pass through "The lands of the Bible." The journey was fruitful in results and his social and professional life was greatly enriched by the offerings he gathered. He remained in the school in Westbrook until the summer of 1869, when he resigned and took pastoral charge of the Universalist Church in Nashua, N. H. His pastorate was a success, productive of marked spiritual results. In the fall of 1872 he removed to Akron, Ohio, and entered as president of Buchtel College, which office he filled for six years. In addition to his official duties, he has preached and lectured in the principal towns and cities of the state, and thus extended his influence and the influence of the college, and done much in behalf of education and religion. In consideration of his merits as a scholar and his high position as an educator, St. Lawrence University, in June, 1874, gave him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. He has since, in company with his wife and son, spent another year in the old country for the purpose of making himself more familiar with men, institutions and places." (Above sketch written by Rev. John S. Lee, D. D., from the History of Marlboro, N. H.)

Dr. McCollester is the author of "After Thoughts of Foreign Travel in Historic Lands and Capital Cities," "Round the Globe in Old and New Paths," "Babylon and Ninevah through American Eyes," "Mexico, Old and New, a Wonderland." Dr. McCollester is now living on the old homestead in Marlboro, and has kindly rendered me assistance in my work. Children:

18945. Eda Sophia McCollester,[9] b. in Dummerston, Vt., Aug. 21, 1853; d. in Swansey, N. H., Nov. 11, 1856.

18946. Carrie Knight McCollester,[9] b. in Swansey, July 8, 1855; d. in Westmoreland, N. H., May 23, 1861.

JOHN Q. A. McCollester, M. D.[8] (18843), b. in Marlboro, N. H., May 3, 1831; m. (1) May 6, 1856, Sarah E., dau. of Joseph and Ann (Longley) Hazen, b. in Shirley, Mass., Feb. 4, 1838; she d. in Groton, now Ayer, Mass., May 5, 1858. He m. (2) Aug. 9, 1859, Georgiana L. Hunt. "From the age of four years to that of ten he attended the district school, which was usually kept two terms of eleven weeks each. At the age of ten years he began work in his father's pail manufactory, and soon exhibited his ability by performing the usual labor of a skilled artisan. His schooling was now limited to the winter term until the autumn of 1846, when he attended a select school in his own village and subsequently received further instruction in the schools and academies in Fitzwilliam, Walpole, Saxton's River and South Woodstock. He was often associated with his brother, Rev. S. H. McCollester, as an assistant teacher, and it was under his supervision mainly that he effected his preparation for college. In the winter of 1848-49, he taught school in the 'Fay Hill' district in Walpole, and enjoyed the New England experience of 'boarding round.' The doctor frequently alludes to this portion of his life with pleasure. In 1851, he passed an examination and was admitted to the class that graduated in 1853 from Norwich University, Norwich, Vt. In 1856, he received the degree of A. M. from this institution. He then entered the office of Dr. James Batcheller of his native town as a student in medicine, attended one course of medical lectures in the Dartmouth Medical School, and for five months, in 1855, he was employed as an assistant in the hospital at Deer Island, Boston Harbor. He went to Philadelphia in October, 1855, attended the course of lectures delivered in the Jefferson Medical College during the winter of 1855-56, and received the degree of M. D. from this institution in March, 1856. In November, 1856, he settled in Groton Junction, now Ayer, Mass. In May, 1862, he volunteered his services as a medical officer and was employed as surgeon in the field and hospital, during and subsequent to the disastrous campaign of McClellan on the Peninsula. In November, 1862, he was commissioned surgeon of the Fifty-third Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, and was on duty with the regiment during its active service in Louisiana.

He was mustered out at the expiration of the term of service of the regiment, Sept. 2, 1863.

"At the conclusion of his military service he resumed his practice in Groton Junction, where he was appointed Examining Surgeon for United States Invalid Pensioners in 1864, which office he held until 1876, when pressure of professional duties obliged him to retire from his position. He served seven years on the Board of School Committee in Groton and two years in Harvard, to which town he moved April, 1869. He is a charter member of Caleb Butler Lodge of A. F. & A. Masons, and is one of its Past Masters. As a physician, gifted with sense remarkably acute, delicate of touch, quick and keen in observation, taking in the physiognomy of disease, reading understandingly books, men and things, his judgment, correct and rapid, appears as if produced by intuition. In his religious views he is liberal, believing that we know too little to assert dogmatically that our brother's views, however different from our own, or however narrow they may appear, are false." (We are indebted to the History of Marlboro, N. H., for the above.) Dr. McCollester now resides in Waltham, Mass. Child:

18949. Anna McCollester,[9] b. Aug. 28, 1857.

EUGENE Field[8] (19335), b. in St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 3, 1850. His mother dying when he was but six years of age, he and his brother were placed in the care of their cousin, Miss French in Amherst, Mass. At eighteen, he entered Williams College, Williamstown, Mass., but his father dying soon after, his guardian placed him in Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., where he remained for eighteen months, later spending some time in the University of Missouri, which he regarded as his alma mater. In 1871, he visited Europe and travelled for six months on the Continent. He m. Oct. 6, 1873, Julia Sutherland Comstock of St. Joseph, Mo.; the same year became a reporter on the St. Louis Evening Journal and in a short time was advanced to be city editor. He next found employment on the St. Joseph Gazette; he was from 1876-1880 editorial writer on the St. Louis Times Jonrnal, then became managing editor of the Kansas City, (Mo.) Times. In 1881, he removed to Denver, Colo., where he became managing editor of the Tribune. He had already gained recognition as a capable and painstaking writer, and during his residence in Denver he attained a wide reputation not only as an exceedingly droll and quaint humorist, but also a writer of delicate verse. In 1883, he accepted a position on the staff of the Chicago, (Ill.) News, and was after associated with that journal. He spent 1889 and 1890 with his family in Europe, where he extended his already wide acquaintance with literary people and was the recipient of many flattering attentions. A lover of books, he collected a large library, which contains many rare and costly volumes. He was a careful and conscientious writer, and all that he wrote possessed real merit. It was said of his prose by one of his critics, "It is filled with delicate sentiment and rare humor which often lies very close to tears." His poems have been widely copied. All are marked by daintiness and pathetic beauty, some of his child poems being among the best in the language. It is, perhaps, as the child minstrel of the West that he will be longest remembered. "Wynken, Blynken and Nod," "Little Boy Blue," "Intry Mintry," "Gander-feather Gift," and other poems for children are widely popular. A short time before his death, he spoke to a friend of the danger and quality of humor, and further remarked that while he had ridiculed meanness, cruelty and dishonesty, he had spared those whom he believed to be honest, except in those good-natured prods which the victims enjoyed quite as much as the public. His printed works were "The Denver Tribune Primer," "Culture's Garland," "A Little Book of Western Verse," "A Little Book of Profitable Tales," "With Trumpet and Drum," "Love Songs of Childhood," "A Second Book of Verse," "The Holy Cross and Other Tales," "Echoes from the Sabine Farms," (with Roswell M. Field) and the unfinished work, "Love Affairs of a Bibliomaniac." He d. in Chicago, Nov. 4, 1895. The family reside in Chicago. Children:
